BOISE — Idaho Atty. Gen. Jim Jones says he will look into allegations of voter irregularities in Blaine County, based partly on the results of a Christmas card mailing by people trying to help Rep. George Hansen retain his seat in Congress.

A group of Second Congressional District residents last week mailed 2,481 Christmas cards to Blaine County voters who gave insufficient address information when they registered. Some 235 of the cards were returned as undeliverable last week.

"It's hard to say what the situation is but I am going to have one of my investigators look at some things and see if there is sufficient grounds to determine some kind of voter fraud," Jones said.

Jones said the returned cards could indicate that voter registration rolls in the county need to be updated or that "the post office fell down on the job."

The controversy centers on a statute passed in 1980 that requires voter registrations to be accompanied by addresses or other information "definitely locating" residence.

The attorney general said counties should have updated the registers when the statute was enacted. "I expect they didn't in Blaine County, but that again is something we'll have to look into."

Since the law requires sufficient indication of residential address, "there should be more clarity in some of those addresses," he said. "It's difficult to tell right now on the surface what the reason is for the irregularities."

Whether intentional voter fraud is involved, as some eastern Idaho lawmakers have indicated, will take some study, Jones said.

Hansen, the seven-term Republican who lost his bid for re-election to Democrat Richard Stallings by a scant 170 votes after a partial recount, has alleged voter fraud in Blaine County.

After apparently exhausting all his options under Idaho law, Hansen's lawyers last Friday filed notice with the House Administration Committee that they would contest the election, based partly on the contention that 2,481 votes in the county should be disqualified on the basis of insufficient address.

The notice asks that the votes be deducted according to the percentage each candiate received from Blaine County voters. That would give Hansen an 800-vote victory in the Second District race. Hansen collected only 26 percent of the 5,600 votes in the traditional Democratic stronghold, while Stallings got 74 percent.

Jones said any irregularities his office turns up could be turned over to the House subcommittee appointed to look into Hansen's complaint. But chances "are fairly nonexistent" that the Idaho Supreme Court will reverse its ruling to deny Hansen a general recount of the Nov. 6 election, he said.

"I think as far as the state goes, we're pretty well out of it right now, with the exception of looking into the allegations of some improprieties at Blaine County," Jones added.

A group of eastern Idaho lawmakers led by Rep. J.F. Chadband, R-Idaho Falls, is pushing for the Legislature to appoint a committee to investigate irregularities in Blaine County. A Fourth District Court lawsuit brought by Lucille Nokleby of Boise also alleges voter fraud in the county.

Miners' rites draw throng

The Associated Press

CASTLE DALE, Utah — Friends and families of 27 miners killed in a mine fire gathered Wednesday for a memorial service and heard a Mormon church official pray for "a divine balm" to heal their hearts.

A crowd of 1,700 packed Castle Dale's Emery High School auditorium for the eulogy by Gordon B. Hinckley, second counselor in the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"This accident becomes a dark, somber chapter. (But) the pain that has come with their passing will not be in vain," Hinckley said. "There will be loneliness, but for those who believe in the mercy of our eternal father, there will also be comfort."

Saying the pain of grief would ease as the years passed, Hinckley prayed that "a divine balm will heal your hearts."

Anna Bell, whose son Phillip Bell, 28, died in the fire, said prayer had helped her deal with the shock and sadness of the disaster. After hearing her son was trapped in the mine last week, she said, "We immediately knelt and asked the Lord's blessings to be with the miners."

Among those attending the service were Gov.-elect Norm Bangerter and James Taylor, president of Utah Power & Light Co., owners of the Wilberg Mine.

Meanwhile, crews tentatively planned to resume sealing off the burning mine by this weekend in an attempt to put out the blaze that trapped the 26 men and a woman below ground late Dec. 19, said Robert Henrie, spokesman for Emery Mining Co., operators of the mine.

In all, 14 portals must be sealed — 11 of them at the Wilberg, three others just off the mine, Henrie said. While workers were not allowed to resume sealing the Wilberg's portals, crews had begun work on the other three Wednesday, he said.

The final decision on when Emery crews return to the Wilberg site remains with the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration, Henrie said.

"We hope by this weekend to have crews back up there," Henrie said. "We think that it will go pretty quickly, a day or day and a half."

Several flareups occurred at the mine Wednesday morning, as pockets of gas ignited and shot flames out of several portals. However, Henrie said the flareups, called ignitions, had been expected as the fire progressed through the mine's tunnels.

The ignitions were away from the Cottonwood area of the mining complex at East Mountain, and did not threaten crews working to seal off the three portals, Henrie said.

While Emery and Carbon county residents mourned Wednesday, Utah Job Service and Emery Mining officials were beginning to ascertain the economic impact of the Wilberg disaster.

About 300 Wilberg miners were displaced, at least temporarily, by the fire, said Dennis Anderson of the Job Service office in Price.

Henrie said some of those miners would be shifted to other Emery coal operations, but how many would not be known for at least a week.

"Those are details we're working out right now. We hope the disruption won't be too extensive," he said. "How many of those miners can be put into other mines or to do other work has still to be determined."

Complaints bring reinstatement of mail carrier

The Associated Press

BRIGHTON, Mich. — A rural mailman who had been fired for delivering his own unstamped Christmas cards to more than 500 people on his route was reinstated Wednesday.

The reinstatement came after his wife, his union and the public complained.

Postal officials in Brighton, 40 miles northwest of Detroit, told Frank DePlanche he would lose his job Jan. 9 for placing the cards in approximately 545 mail boxes on his route, according to DePlanche's wife, Marie.

But in Detroit Wednesday night, district postal officials said DePlanche would be reinstated in his job and instead suspended for five days.

He also would be required to pay the postage for the cards, William Smiley, the postal service's district director of employee and labor relations, said in a statement.

Smiley's statement said employees "are prohibited from using teir employment for personal pecuniary advantage," but added: "In reviewing the case, however, we've taken into consideration Mr. DePlanche's 29 years of service."

DePlanche, a postman who has worked out of the Brighton post office for 12 years, was hospitalized for stress Monday at McPherson Community Health Center in nearby Howell after learning he would be fired.

A switchboard operator who would not give her name said DePlanche is still undergoing tests and is listed in good condition. She also said he is not accepting calls.

"I think it's great," said Kelli DePlanche, 19-year-old daughter of the mail carrier. "My dad maybe can rest now, maybe can get well enough to come home."

Postmaster Emil Engel declined to comment on the case Wednesday.

"Anything I could say would hurt the employee," Engel said in a telephone interview from his home in Brighton. "I think any comment at all about firing is premature because the employee has his rights under the grievance and arbitration procedure."

Mrs. DePlanche said her husband, who is 47, had been harassed since he filed for workers' compensation benefits in 1980 after missing 13 months of work because of a pinched nerve.

Meanwhile, the public appeared to side overwhelmingly with DePlanche.

The Detroit Free Press, in a column that invites readers to phone in opinions on public issues, reported that 98 percent of the 1,960 calls received said DePlanche should be reinstated. The names of the callers are not published in the column.

One caller among the 2 percent who thought DePlanche should not be reinstated said: "I have to pay for my postage. He should have to pay for his, too."

Earlier, Engel told the Brighton Argus, a weekly newspaper, that DePlanche was placed on paid leave until an investigation was completed.

Reagan rips Afghan occupation

The Associated Press

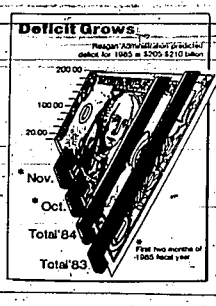

WASHINGTON — Two weeks before the United States and Soviet Union are to meet in an effort to break a stalemate in nuclear arms negotiations, President Reagan declared Wednesday that Moscow's five-year occupation of Afghanistan "constitutes a serious impediment to the improvement of our bilateral relations."

Reagan's comments were made in a written statement distributed by the White House press office a day before the fifth anniversary of the Dec. 27, 1979, Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"We cannot and will not remain silent on Afghanistan," said Reagan. "We join our voice with other members of the world community in calling for a prompt, negotiated end to this brutal conflict."

The president said the United States "has made clear to Soviet leaders that the presence of Soviet occupying forces in Afghanistan constitutes a serious impediment to the improvement of our bilateral relations."

Red ink may be heading for record

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government ran up another giant budget deficit in November — $28.46 billion — as the latest total of red ink added to fears the country was headed for its worst deficit year in history.

After the first two months of the 1985 fiscal year, the deficit was running 23 percent ahead of its pace for the same period last year.

The Reagan administration, which only four months ago was predicting that this year's deficit would be lower than in 1984, is now bracing for a red ink total between $205 billion and $210 billion.

That would be well above the previous record of $195.4 billion set in fiscal 1983. The deficit for fiscal 1984, which ended on Sept. 30, was $175.3 billion.

The Treasury Department's latest report indicated that in November the government:

• Took in $51.49 billion in tax receipts, compared to $46.2 billion for the same month one year earlier. The biggest part of the revenue came from individual income taxes — $24.79 billion.

• Spent $79.96 billion. The biggest spending categories, as usual, were the Department of Health and Human Services, $25.34 billion, including Social Security payments; the military, $20.22 billion, and interest on the national debt of $13.5 billion.

The debt, which now stands at $1.65 trillion, has risen more rapidly in the past four years than during any similar period in history.

Administration critics have blamed the increase in part on the Reagan-pushed tax cut of 1981, but the administration lays the blame on the 1981-82 recession.

The administration has blamed the sharp slowdown in economic growth during the last half of this year for the deteriorating budget picture.

The economy, which boomed along at an 8.6 percent rate in the first half of the year, slumped to a 1.6 percent growth rate from July through September and was estimated at a still anemic 2.8 percent rate for the last three months of the year.

A slower economy means lower company profits and lower levels of employment than originally expected. That, in turn, translates into a lower level of tax receipts for the government.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said recently that even if faster growth resumes early next year, government revenues are likely to be $14 billion below previous estimates because of the slow growth in the last half of 1984.

Private economists, viewing the November deficit figure, agreed with that forecast.

In addition, officials have said low market prices and big crops are likely to add $3 billion to the cost of agricultural price supports this fiscal year.

Plane's riders survive crash

BOISE (AP) — A twin-engine plane carrying six people crashed in sagebrush while approaching the Boise airport shortly after dusk on Wednesday. There were no reports of serious injuries.

The Federal Aviation Administration identified the plane as a Piper Seneca registered in Canada. The names of the people aboard and information about the circumstances of the crash were unavailable from the FAA.

The flight originated in Calgary, Alberta, and was destined for San Francisco, with stops planned for Great Falls, Mont., and Boise.

Air traffic controllers lost contact with the plane when it was about two miles from the airport, said Dick Ferguson, FAA spokesman in Seattle.

The plane crashed in brush one-half mile northeast of the Gowen Road-Federal Way intersection, said Ada County Sheriff's Sgt. Ian Ishiyama, whose department was notified of the crash at 5:44 p.m. He said the crash did not result in a fire.

Los Angeles refinery erupts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 160 firefighters battled an oil refinery blaze Wednesday that shot flames 100 feet into the night sky, but there were no reports of injuries, officials said.

A series of explosions preceded the spectacular blaze at the Texaco oil refinery and distribution plant in the Wilmington section of Los Angeles, forcing workers to run for their lives.

The cause of the blaze was undetermined and by 8 p.m., four hours after it started, the blaze was "almost completely out," Fire Department spokesman Ed Reed said.

Schroeder resumes exercising

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Artificial heart recipient William J. Schroeder went back to his routine Wednesday following a family Christmas, working at exercises to improve speech and coordination damaged by post-surgery strokes.

He was listed in serious but stable condition, with his vital signs normal, said officials at Humana Heart Institute International.

One milestone planned for Wednesday, a shower bath, was put off, however, when Schroeder tired after the speech and occupational therapy sessions, said Linda Broaddus, a Humana Inc. spokeswoman.

Burns fatal to Boise teenager

BOISE (AP) — A Boise house fire that killed a mother and her two teen-age children on Monday has claimed another young life.

Maria Mews, 14, daughter of Merl and Rose Mews of Boise, died at about 9:30 a.m. Wednesday of complications from carbon monoxide poisoning she suffered in the fire, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center spokeswoman Kim Rogers said.

Miss Mews was an overnight guest at the home of her friend, Karen Ault, 13, when the blaze struck early Monday morning. She had been hospitalized with burns to her legs and carbon monoxide poisoning since the fire.

Karen Ault, her mother Marilynn, 40, and brother David, 16, were killed in the fire. The father, Robert W. Ault Jr., and three firefighters suffered minor injuries in the blaze, but were released Monday after treatment.

A fourth fireman, Ron Amandus, 29, was listed in stable condition Wednesday at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Boise.

Investigators on Wednesday were at the fire site, sifting through the rubble for clues to its origins.

Secret chemical tests charged

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Union Carbide Corp., the U.S. company whose plant in Bhopal leaked poison gas that killed 2,000 people, had tested new chemicals without obtaining required government permission, news reports claimed Wednesday.

The Press Trust of India news agency quoted a top defense scientist as saying that the company's research center, established in Bhopal six years ago, had conducted studies in "the gray area between agricultural research and anti-crop warfare."

Holiday road toll exceeds 500

CHICAGO (AP) — Increased travel and generally good weather may have helped push the number of Christmas holiday traffic fatalities beyond that projected by the National Safety Council, the group said Wednesday.

At least 501 traffic fatalities were reported during the 4½-day holiday weekend, surpassing council estimates of 370 to 470 highway deaths.

The holiday death count began at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at midnight Tuesday.

Freezing rain ices Nebraska; snow in Southern California

By The Associated Press

Freezing rain glazed Nebraska on Wednesday and snow fell in Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa and the mountains of Southern California, where temperatures dipped as low as 12 degrees.

The California Department of Transportation reported that snowfall closed the Angeles Crest Highway Wednesday afternoon from Kratka Ridge to Big Pines, 30 to 45 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

"It's just coming down in great fluffy flakes," said Mary Anderson, a ski patrol leader at the Mount Waterman ski area. "We got about 6 or 8 inches this afternoon. A lot of people are caught without their chains."

Travelers' advisories were posted for southern Lower Michigan, northern Indiana, southern Wisconsin, northern Illinois and east-central Iowa.

State police in Michigan said a single-engine plane carrying an Ohio family made an emergency landing in a snowstorm Wednesday night in the parking lot of a General Motors Corp. factory near Ypsilanti.

All five people on board were unhurt, said Betty Doepker, a dispatcher.

The ice fell early Wednesday in the Midwest, forcing highway closings and reducing the expected morning crush of post-Christmas-Day shoppers.

"It was just extremely slick," said Wayne Teten, district engineer for the Nebraska Department of Roads in Omaha, where police closed Interstate 80 and its spurs for more than 4½ hours until 8:30 a.m.

Sgt. Richard Reitz of the Nebraska State Patrol said several accidents were reported, but collisions weren't the main problem: "I think probably our biggest problem is having people slide off the road."

Some merchants said the ice discouraged shoppers from coming to their stores for post-Christmas sales.

"It's not a normal day after Christmas," said Ron Marvin, merchandise manager at the Sears store at the Crossroads mall in Omaha. "With the ice like it is, we won't have the volume we usually have until early afternoon, when it starts melting."

Four inches of snow fell by 9 a.m. MST north of Muscatine, Iowa, 2 inches fell in one hour at Milwaukee and Madison, Wis., with more than eight inches of snow on the ground by nightfall in the Milwaukee area.

Heavier snowfall during the 6 hours ending at 11 a.m. MST included 3 inches included 3 inches at Madison, Marengo, Iowa, and Rockford, Ill.

Showers were scattered over southern Florida, southern Texas, central Arizona and the central Pacific coast.

Gusty winds of as much as 35 mph prevailed over northern New England and winds reached 60 mph along the base of Casper Mountain in Casper, Wyo., and at Livingston, Mont.

Frigid air continued to prevail over portions of the northern Plains and the upper Great Lakes. Early afternoon temperatures remained below zero over eastern upper Michigan, northern Minnesota and northern North Dakota.

In Southern California, the temperature dropped down to 12 degrees early Wednesday in the Antelope Valley community of Lancaster, while Los Angeles shivered in 46-degree weather and Long Beach slid down to 43.

By contrast, temperatures were in the 70s and 80s over Alabama, Georgia and most of Florida. The temperature at Tampa, Fla., at 1 p.m. EST est was 83 degrees, breaking a record set two years ago by two degrees.

Beating victim's aid cries ignored

LOMPOC, Calif. (AP) — A woman's cries for help went unheeded for 25 minutes as she was beaten to death, when one neighbor refused to get involved and another tried to explain to an inebriated friend that he should call police, authorities said Wednesday.

The body of Julie Ann Rosebro, 20, her head covered with blood, was found early on Christmas Day inside the door of the apartment she shared with Ernest V. Martinez, police Capt. Bob Hebert said.

Martinez, a dishwasher, was booked for investigation of murder, authorities said.

At least two of her neighbors in this community 140 miles northwest of Los Angeles heard the attack, which began at 12:15 a.m., police Officer Ron Jones said.

One of the neighbors investigated the noise and saw the woman lying in on the floor "moving and crying," but decided he didn't want to become involved in a dispute between the woman and her boyfriend, Jones said.

Hebert said the man heard the woman being beaten and calling for help after he returned to his apartment, but still didn't do anything.

Another neighbor, a woman, said she heard Ms. Rosebro's screams but had no telephone and was initially afraid to venture out alone. Eventually, Hebert said, the woman went to the apartment of another neighbor to get help, but that neighbor was drunk and the woman had difficulty explaining the situation to him and convincing him to call police.

Police didn't identify the neighbors.

Today's weather

Chance of snow showers falling today

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:

Slight chance of snow showers by early this morning, and again during the afternoon and evening. Southerly winds 10 to 20 mph. Lows in the teens and highs 30 to 35.

Northern Nevada and Utah:

Nevada: Increasing chance of snow showers today. Highs from the 30s to middle 40s. Lows generally in the teens to mid 20s.

Utah: Scattered snow showers over northern mountains today. Highs in the 30s to low 40s and lows in the middle teens to near 30.

Camas Prairie and Lower Wood River Valley:

Chance of snow showers by early this morning. Patches of valley fog. Lows near zero. Light snow this afternoon with one to three inches accumulation possible. Southerly winds 10 to 20 mph. Highs from 25 to 30.

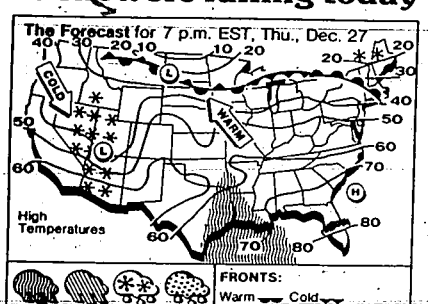

Synopsis:

Snow moved into northern Idaho Wednesday, but southern sections of the state remained dry.

Skies clouded over around midmorning, keeping temperatures on the chilly side much of the day across the Magic Valley. Afternoon readings were generally in the 20s and low 30s across much of the state, although the Mini-Cassia area and the Grangeville and Lewiston districts reported readings in the 40 degree range.

The warmest temperature in Idaho Wednesday was 42 degrees at Malta while Stanley reported the coldest, 15 below zero.

The extended forecast for southern Idaho areas is for dry weather Saturday with a chance of snow showers on Sunday and more dry conditions on Monday. Highs 20s to low 30s and lows mostly in the teens.

Tehran bombing blamed on U.S.

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A second bomb went off in the Iranian capital early Wednesday, less than 12 hours after a blast that killed six people and wounded 50, the official Iranian news agency said. Iran blamed the United States fo the explosions.

The United States called the allegation absurd.

The second bombing occurred at 6:20 a.m., wrecking four parked cars and damaging several shops and houses in downtown Tehran but causing no casualties, Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency said.

At 7:15 p.m. Tuesday, a bomb went off in a crowded Tehran square, killing six people and injuring 50, Irna said. The bomb, estimated to contain 45-50 pounds of explosives, exploded in a parked taxi, the agency said.

PAUL DOUGLAS
Convicted of lying

Nebraska's top attorney steps down

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Attorney General Paul Douglas, who survived an impeachment trial but was convicted of lying about his business dealings, resigned Wednesday, citing concern for his family and the "image of this office."

Douglas, whose resignation takes effect Jan. 1, denied any wrongdoing and said he will appeal his perjury conviction "with vigor, and in my opinion, successfully."

"I'm very proud of it, and I do not want to do anything that would do harm to it," Douglas said of the post he has held for 10 years.

Douglas, 57, said he would give his letter of resignation to Gov. Bob Kerrey on Thursday and would immediately start looking for work outside the legal profession.

He said the suspension from practicing law that he received from the Nebraska Supreme Court last week has "drastically limited my options."

Douglas was convicted Dec. 14 in Lancaster County District Court of felony perjury for lying about his business dealings with the failed Commonwealth Savings Co. of Lincoln and former Commonwealth Vice President Marvin Copple. Judge Jeffre Cheuvront has not set a sentencing date. Douglas faces a maximum of 20 years in prison and up to a $25,000 fine.

At a news conference Wednesday, Douglas denied allegations that his actions contributed to the collapse of Commonwealth.

FmHA borrowers say they want debt eased

WASHINGTON (AP) — An informal survey indicates that about 30 percent of the Farmers Home Administration's 273,000 borrowers want help from the agency in easing their farm debt load under a relief package announced three months ago, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

Charles W. Shuman, FmHA administrator, said the survey conducted in 42 states showed that about 80,000 of the agency's borrowers "have requested interviews at county offices to determine if they are eligible for assistance" such as deferral of payments and other terms.

Shuman said that FmHA offices approved "farm debt set-asides" for 2,669 borrowers through the first week of December since the program was announced in September by President Reagan.

"In addition, we are helping more than 8,000 farm borrowers with our regular forms of servicing assistance such as rescheduling and reamortizing loans without needing to set aside part of the debt," he said.

For those who qualify, FmHA can set aside for five years without interest up to 25 percent of their FmHA debt or $200,000, whichever is less, to help restore producers' cash flow.

The survey also showed that 109 loans of non-FmHA borrowers have been guaranteed by the agency after private lenders wrote off enough of the debt to qualify for the guarantees.

As announced last fall, to qualify for FmHA guarantees, a private lender such as a bank would have to forgive 10 percent of the debt load. The FmHA then would guarantee up to 90 percent of the remaining balance.

The agency, however, is preparing to issue a change in regulations which would allow a bank or other private lender to reduce the interest rate on a loan in order to qualify for the 10 percent debt write-off. In effect, that could mean a reduced interest rate spread over the lifetime of a loan, rather than an across-the-board 10 percent foregiveness.

Clinic bombings eyed

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A team of federal explosives experts was assembled Wednesday to investigate the bombings of three clinics where abortions were performed, while the government offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to an arrest and conviction in the case.

The pre-dawn blasts on Christmas Day destroyed one of the targets and caused heavy damage at the other two. The total property loss was estimated at $375,000.

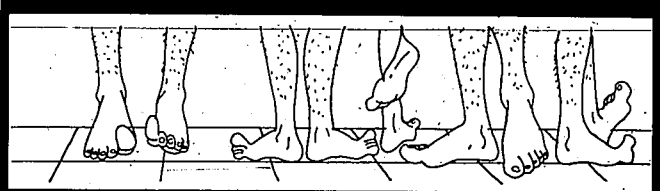

"This isn't going to stop anything," said Dr. Bo Bagenholm, whose office was seriously damaged Tuesday. "It's just a matter of putting it back together."

A team of about 15 U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms explosives experts from throughout the Southeast was joining local agents and investigators from the Florida fire marshal's office, Pensacola police department and Escambia County sheriff's department.

Gov. Bob Graham also ordered the Florida Department of Law Enforcement's Pensacola crime lab to assist.

Man's story reflects jobs, work in U.S.

On first reading, the story of Lowry Schultz, the laid-off Caterpiller Tractor worker who was rehired after two years only to be let go again six hours later, is a tale of one man in a vain search for work.

But Schultz' story says a lot more about working in modern America and the kinds of changes which are happening in both employment and labor.

One is the shifting nature of older "smokestack" industries, many of them in the Midwest. Heavy manufacturing jobs, like the one Schultz had for 10 years at the Peoria, Ill. factory, are simply not as necessary as they once were. Automation, improved farm efficiency, and competition have all put thousands of highly-paid, blue collar workers like Schultz out of jobs.

So where are they going and what are they doing? Schultz, like many others, moved to the Southwest and restablished himself in Phoenix. That too tells a story of the growth of the nation and how it is shifting from one region to another.

So does his new employment. Schultz now works as a custodian at a school where he says "pay isn't real good." That too is a common pattern of highly-paid industrial workers being absorbed into the work force at lesser pay levels, often in service trades.

We don't know the man, but a couple of other things about Schultz and American labor come through in the article.

Schultz was recalled to Caterpiller, then bumped when others with more seniority also were brought back. His fate rested, apparently, not in his job skills and how good they were, but only in how high up the scale he was relative to other union members.

His response to this was to return to Phoenix where, he says, he will look for a better job. But he's "not in a hurry. I know something will come along." Gee, last time we checked, the best jobs went to those people who displayed the most get up and go.

So what did he get from going back to Peoria, if only briefly? Well, he says, the "one good thing" is that his brief recall got him vested in the Caterpiller pension plan. He's got his ten years in. Easy street? Hardy. "We're just trying to do the best we know how."

From afar, this man seems almost a stereotype of the displaced American blue-collar worker, responding to the forces around him, but not in control of them.

Work and American life are integral, but the changes reflected here are both the result and the cause of what is wrong with the modern industrial world.

It is tempting to point the finger at the industries themselves, the unions, the politicians. But in the end, we must look in the mirror. The portrait of Lowry Schultz is such a glance.

Reagan can pull along public support

Barry Sussman

WASHINGTON — The Washington odds makers seem to be losing faith in President Reagan. They are questioning whether Congress will buy Reagan's plan to reduce huge federal budget deficits by slashing domestic spending without increasing taxes or taking a big bite out of the military budget.

There is simply a lack of public support for further sweeping reduction of programs that aid the poor, the elderly or the middle class, the odds makers say.

But it is rash to conclude that the president won't get his proposals through simply because few people approve of them. If we had to wait for the public on its own to endorse Reagan's original 1981 measures, for example, we might still be waiting.

The tax cuts he won then were not a high priority for most citizens; the deep cuts in social programs, by and large, had little public support. And while there was concern that we weren't spending enough for defense, there was no outcry for the huge military building that Reagan put through.

Take the tax cuts. You would think you could always count on people to approve reduced taxes. Reagan ran hard on that principle in 1979 and 1980, making the Kemp-Roth proposal for a 30 percent across-the-board income tax reduction a cornerstone of his campaign. But the public did not seem impressed.

National attention was focused then on inflation. Taxes did not even make the list of top national concerns, according to a Gallup poll two weeks before the 1980 election.

Earlier, in 1979, a Washington Post poll showed the public about evenly divided on whether taxes should be cut if that meant "putting off some important things that need to be done."

What happened on the issue of taxes, simply put, is that Reagan taught the Congress, the people and the public opinion analysts a few lessons about how to mold public opinion. His political opponents had been repudiated and stilled by the 1980 election. He had the public ear, and he knew how to take advantage of it.

By February 1981, just after Reagan introduced his first budget proposals, there was massive support for his version of Kemp-Roth. A Washington Post-ABC News poll showed 73 percent favoring the tax cuts and only 22 percent opposed.

The record on increased military expenditures is not very different. After Vietnam, the public supported decreases in military spending.

With the taking of American hostages in Iran and the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in late 1979, sentiment moved toward increased preparedness. By January 1980, 49 percent in a Gallup poll said that too little was spent for defense, compared to 38 percent who said either the right amount or too much was being spent. By September, Gallup showed 69 percent favoring increased military spending, 29 percent opposed.

The desire for a stronger military — or at least one that people perceived as stronger — was clear. Nevertheless, there were no findings suggesting that the public ever envisioned increases of the kind Reagan put through, which were the largest ever in peace time, or that there was support for missiles and other armaments at the expense of college loans and food stamps.

Again, however, Reagan was able to build support. As the program was being put in place, a few opponents charged that the increased military spending, combined with tax cuts, would result in federal deficits beyond any the country had previously seen. They were seen as spoil sports.

Even as the deficit problem loomed, Reagan won overwhelming public backing for his massive military spending, and not just for some theoretical proposals.

One of the main concerns about candidate Reagan was that he would be too harsh on the poor. Gallup showed 44 percent of potential voters saying that in 1980. In February 1981, according to Washington Post-ABC News findings, more people saw the poor as being hurt by Reagan's cuts than any other group. Nevertheless, by 72 to 21 percent, the public supported the president's proposed spending cuts.

What happened in all these areas was that Reagan worked on the American psyche the way a good salesman works on customers. A man goes in looking for a suit to replace one that is worn out. He is talked into buying two very costly ones and an overcoat that he did not know he was in the market for, spends a great deal more than he intended and goes home happy — until the bills start coming in.

In social programs, there were three main components in Reagan's success in reshaping public opinion in 1981.

One was the argument that slashes were fiscally necessary. If taxes were to be cut and America made stronger militarily, the money had to come from somewhere.

The second was the argument that the social programs of the previous 30 years had been a failure, a favorite Reagan theme.

The third was the insufficient vocal opposition from other national leaders. Republicans followed the president as if in lock step. While many Democrats cast their vote against Reagan's first budget, there were enough defections for his programs to be enacted.

There is a rule in the formation of mass opinion on matters dealing with public affairs. It could be called the "follow the leader" rule. People have weak, not strong, views on most policy issues. Hence, they look to leaders to point the way. When only one side of an issue gets a full airing, the public begins to think there is only one side to the issue.

Today the situation is similar to what it was four years ago. The president's first plans for coping with the deficit are to sacrifice social programs through $34 billion in cuts.

Again, Reagan will be able to demonstrate fiscal necessity, and this time the case is stronger than it was four years ago, because more and more bills have been coming in.

As for the public, it also stands pretty much where it did four years ago. Polls these days show majority opposition to cutting social programs despite the enormous concern over the deficits. People would much prefer to see the defense budget brought down some.

In September, for example, a Post-ABC News survey showed the public opposed to cuts in social programs, 58 to 39 percent, and in favor of cutting military spending, 52 to 46 percent. Other polls, including ones taken on Election Day, yield similar results.

The one unclear factor is component number three: Whether national leaders who oppose social cuts will take their case forcefully to the public, as the president himself will. If they do, then the odds makers may be correct.

If they do not, then look for the polls to be showing a swing toward the Reagan position in a one-sided debate, and, most likely, for Congress to follow along, saying, as many members did in 1981, that they are only responding to what the public wants.

Electoral college is flawed, needs at least some revision

James Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — It caused scarcely a ripple in the flow of the evening news. Newspapers buried the story of Ronald Reagan's election on their inside pages. Unless you looked quickly and carefully, you might not have been aware that the presidential election that counted wasn't on Nov. 6. It was on Dec. 17.

That was the appointed day for the presidential electors to meet, state by state, and to cast their official ballots for president and vice president. By good fortune — not by law or by court decree — everything went smoothly this year. All the electors dutifully cast their votes according to the November returns: Reagan, 525; Mondale, 13.

The Electoral College, as it is known for no good reason, is the vermiform appendix of our political system. It serves no useful purpose, and it contains a potential for painful trouble. It ought to be abolished. While we're at it, one other time-bomb provision of the Constitution ought also to be defused.

No elector defected 10 days ago, and Reagan's margin was so immense that a few defections would not have mattered. But let there be no doubt that presidential electors, once chosen in November, are free as birds the following month.

All the Constitution says is that "the electors shall meet in their respective states and vote by ballot for president and vice president, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves." The Constitution adds a few ministerial provisions, and that's that. Once the electors have forwarded their signed ballots to the Senate, the college dissolves and the electors go their way. They are legally liable to no one.

The first faithless elector was a Pennsylvania Federalist who voted in 1796 for Jefferson rather than for Adams. In 1820 a New Hampshire elector who had been chosen for Monroe voted for John Quincy Adams instead.

In 1948 a Truman elector in Tennessee voted for Strom Thurmond. In 1956 an Alabama elector for Stevenson cast his vote for a local judge instead. In 1960 a Nixon elector in Oklahoma went for Harry F. Byrd. In 1968 a North Carolina elector who theoretically was pledged to Nixon defected to George Wallace. In 1972 a Republican elector in Virginia cast his official vote for the Libertarian candidate.

None of these faithless actions affected the outcome, but it may be useful to pray a moment over what might have been. The electoral vote in 1948 was Truman 303, Dewey 189 and Thurmond 39. It then took 266 electoral votes to win. If the Truman electors in Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee had been joined in defecting by even one elector from Florida, the 1948 election would have been thrown into the House of Representatives.

There we meet the second ticking time bomb. In such an event, the vote is taken by states — and each state has but one vote.

Twice in our history, in 1801 and again in 1825, when no candidate attained a majority of electoral votes, the House had to choose. In 1916 a switch of only 12 electoral votes would have thrown the Wilson-Hughes election into the House. It would have taken only 36 defectors in 1960, only 29 in 1976, to have triggered a political crisis.

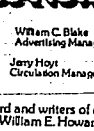

I am not much on constitutional amendment — any constitutional amendment — but modest revision of Article II strikes me as a prudent idea. Mind you, I am not for a moment suggesting that we go to direct popular election of our presidents.

So reckless a move would set off unimaginable earthquakes within our federal system. Nothing is basically wrong with the arrangement by which each state casts an electoral vote equal to its total representation in the House and Senate. What is needed is simply insurance against faithless electors and "one state, one vote."

Agreed, there is great merit in the maxim made famous by Robert Byrd: If it ain't broke, don't fix it. But another maxim reminds us to repair the roof before the rain falls. All our system requires is a little patchwork, but we ought to get on with the task.

James Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

Arguing about alcohol one of America's oldest traditions

George Will

WASHINGTON — New Year's Eve, a grim occasion of forced gaiety, involves mortification of the flesh and spirit simultaneously. It is a fit occasion for considering America's changing attitudes about alcohol.

A sunrise out of a sea of blood is the new seriousness about drunken driving. But this is just society's self-defense against gross carnage. More interesting, because they involve subtle social reasoning, are the constantly changing attitudes toward alcohol consumption generally.

Massachusetts has banned most bar and restaurant "happy hours" and other drink promotions. New Jersey's Supreme Court has held that a host can be liable for injuries inflicted by a guest who became intoxicated on the host's liquor.

President Reagan recently put aside conservative reluctance to regulate from Washington and signed a bill denying federal highway subsidies to states that do not raise their drinking ages to 21. There are moves afoot to regulate the frequency and substance of advertisements for alcoholic beverages and to use taxes to cut consumption.

The merits of these measures are debatable. But, taken together, there may be additional evidence of a pendular movement away from individualist libertarianism and toward communitarian conservatism.

Attitudes toward alcohol often have changed with prevailing ideology. This is explained in "Drinking in America: A History" (Free Press) by Mark Lender and James Martin.

The doctrine of liberty promoted during the Revolutionary era weakened communal and individual restraints in many areas of life. By 1790 an average American over 15 drank about 6 gallons of absolute alcohol annually, and 7.1 gallons by 1810. The average today is about 2.9 gallons.

Instead of tea breaks there often were "eleveners" and 4 o'clock drams of whiskey, not to mention breakfast bracers. The practice of politicians "treating" voters to whiskey affirmed democracy — the rulers drinking with the masses.

The self-sufficient individual was the center of — almost the full expression of — American values in the Jacksonian era. In eclipse was the idea that communal values and individual virtue are the only solid foundations for free institutions.

But by 1850 there was a dramatic decline in alcohol consumption. Some snobbery was involved: the Irish drank to assert Irishness and Germans clung to beer-drinking habits for cultural identity, so some of the other groups decided that hard drinking was for immigrants, not "real" Americans. But there was also a revival of the "stewardship tradition." That involved the idea that a stable social order and temperate popular government depends on a general atmosphere of temperence — in religion, culture, commerce — and a moral elite of exemplary character to guide society.

With the rise of less severely individualist thinking, people became more willing to see alcoholism not just as a problem of the isolated drinker but of a generally intemperate social climate. The movement for prohibition — itself an intemperate measure — began to grow.

By the 1850s, annual per-capita consumption of absolute alcohol fell well below three gallons. After the Civil War, industrialism, urbanization and the unsettling pluralism of the immigration era heightened anxieties about a fundamental lack of discipline in American life and of stability in the American character.

The prohibition movement grew and acquired a "democratic" rationale: The subordination of the masses in Europe was linked to the enervating effect of excessive drinking — permitted by Europe's ruling classes. (That idea has a contemporary echo. In the anti-utopia of Orwell's "1984," the one commodity that is cheap and plentiful is gin.) Prohibition was enacted in the aftermath of the World War I emphasis on national unity and discipline.

But as Americans became more confident of their ability to contain the disintegrative forces of modern life, instruments of new experiences (telephones, automobiles, radio, movies) encouraged a reassertion of America's primary value — individualism. Drinking, especially in defiance of the law, became a sign of healthy self-assertion.

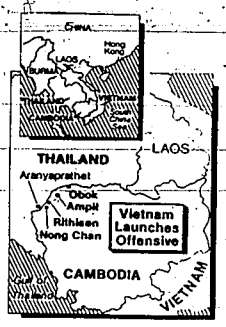

In some ways prohibition "worked," and even was "progressive" in that it improved the lot of the lower classes. Some wages that hitherto had been spent on drink were saved or spent on family necessities, and alcohol-related illnesses and accidents declined. But the net result was not, to say the least, the desired one — a virtuous republic. It was more "A City on a Still."

In America there will always be pendular swings, first toward severe individualism and then toward using law to restrain appetites and shape behavior for the collective public good.

Certainly arguing about alcohol is one of America's oldest traditions. As William Bradford noted indignantly in his diary, he and other passengers of the Mayflower "were hastened ashore and made to drink water" — ugh! — "that the seamen might have the more beer."

George Will writes for Newsweek.

Battles in Cambodian camps escalate

NONG SAMET, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese troops overran the largest resistance camp in Cambodia Wednesday in a "savage" attack that Thai officials said caused scores of casualties, many among civilians.

Western analysts said the fighting continued as guerrillas mounted counterattacks, and predicted that the fighting would spread as Hanoi tries to wipe out other guerrilla bases before the spring monsoon season.

Reliable casualty figures were not available. Bun Sol, a guerrilla leader, said 10 guerrillas had been killed and 14 wounded in the fighting at the Rithisen guerrilla camp which had been controlled by guerrillas of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front guerrillas.

But Thai military officials said 55 guerrillas had been killed and 47 wounded, while casualties among Rithisen's civilians included 63 killed and 87 wounded.

The International Red Cross, offering emergency medical services along the border, said 59 wounded civilians were treated Tuesday and Wednesday. From the aid stations established by international relief agencies across the border in Thailand, an estimated 61,000 civilian refugees from Rithisen could see the smoke from their former homes, set ablaze by the Vietnamese.

Sawanit Kongsiri, a spokesman for Thailand's Foreign Ministry, described the Vietnamese attack as "cruel, savage and brutal," saying Hanoi's troops had employed artillery and tank guns against civilians, including children.

He said the fighting had not spilled over into Thailand but that the Thai military was closely observing the situation along the tense frontier.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Alan Romberg criticized the attacks. "Vietnam's continuing aggression in Cambodia, directed chiefly against civilian camps and noncommunist military forces, is contemptible," he said. "The Cambodian people, after so many years of war, should be allowed to choose their own government and to live in peace."

Romberg also noted that the United Nations, most recently in a 110-22 vote, has repeatedly called for a Vietnamese withdrawal and the re-establishment of Cambodian authority through free elections under international auspices.

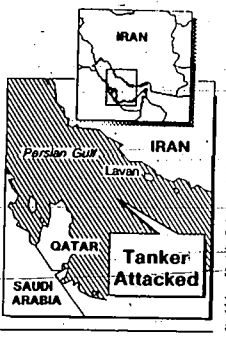

Thai military and guerrilla sources said the Vietnamese had positioned tanks inside the Rithisen guerrilla camp and were warding off the counterattacks by the guerrilla fighters. All the sources were interviewed only on condition their names not be used.

The Vietnamese attacks have focused on the anticommunist Khmer group and, to a lesser extent, the communist Khmer Rouge.

Iranian jets set big Spanish tanker afire in second Persian Gulf attack

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Warplanes bombed a Spanish supertanker in the Persian Gulf on Wednesday, setting it afire.

Shipping sources said the planes were Iranian and that it was the second Iranian raid in the same area in two days.

The attack on the 122,582-ton Aragon took place 10 miles north of the Shah Olam Shoals, in the same area where the Indian supertanker Kanchenjunga was struck Tuesday.

The Kanchenjunga had picked up a full cargo of Saudi Arabian crude oil at the Ras Tanura terminal and was on its way out of the gulf to India. The Aragon was on its way to Ras Tanura to pick up a load of crude destined for Spain.

The two raids, latest in the four-year-old Iran-Iraq war, apparently were retaliation for a series of Iraqi attacks on ships near Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal over the past three weeks, according to the shipping sources speaking on the condition they not be identified by name.

"The gulf is obviously a danger area because of the Iraq-Iran war, but we thought Ras Tanura was safer than Kharg," said Jose Fernandez, a spokesman for Fletamentos Maritimos, the Madrid-based company that owns the Aragon.

"The vessel was fortunate in that there were no personal injuries or loss of life," Fernandez told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

He said reports from the ship indicated that Iranian warplanes fired two rockets into the deck of the tanker, leaving gaping holes in two starboard tanks. The fire was brought under control within an hour, he said, and the ship was heading for Bahrain for repairs.

Communists, Christians offer aid

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Communists and Christians have pledged fresh aid donations for drought-stricken Ethiopia, including 500 Soviet tractors and $20 million worth of grain from the World Council of Churches, it was announced Wednesday.

The World Council's head of emergency relief and refugee services, Nicco Keulmans, pledged 30,000 tons of food grain before leaving Addis Ababa on Monday after a tour of the famine-afflicted north, the official Ethiopian News Agency reported.

Keulmans said the aid was intended not only as donations for emergency relief but also for rehabilitation projects to help peasant farmers become productive again.

He also promised $7 million to cover transportation and other costs for the Ethiopian Orthodox Church to supervise the projects.

The Ethiopian Church said it would use some of the money to open 17 new food distribution centers in Ethiopia.

An estimated 7.7 million of the 42 million inhabitants of the East African nation are threatened with severe food shortages.

Some 30 relief agencies, most of them Western, already run 211 feeding centers in the country.

The Soviet Union, the main foreign supporter of Mengistu Haile Mariam's Marxist government, has also signed new agreements for more aid to the Horn of Africa nation, the Ethiopian News Agency reported Wednesday.

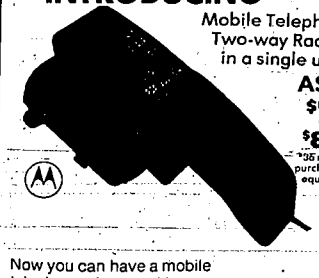

OPEC ministers try again

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — OPEC ministers on Wednesday prepared to resume efforts to shore up oil prices amid new warnings that the cartel's survival hinges on a plan to enforce its widely ignored price and production quotas.

Kuwait's oil minister, Shiek Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah, prior to departing for Geneva, said he was confident the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would agree to create a policing agency "to protect OPEC from itself."

Ali told the United Arab Emirates' news agency WAM that OPEC must restore its credibility by sticking to its quotas. Otherwise, he said, each member state would try to further its own interests by stepping up production, leading to a collapse of prices on the market that "no amount of increased production will compensate."

What's what

Many an old circus hand believed clowns were born, not made. Today, they say, the clown schools turn out plenty of technique, but only rarely does a student possess that indescribable clown quality akin to something like a genius for it. Maybe the San Diego Chicken — a clown is a clown — has it, don't know. Lot of imitators don't, though.

In one out of every 10 divorces nationwide, the departing wife is over age 55.

In defense of his camel, an Arabian Bedouin recently spoke with an accent I'll not even try to imitate here when he said: "Yea, but you can't milk a Toyota."

FISH AND CHIPS

In England, it is widely understood that when you buy "fish and chips," the potatoes are just plain potatoes, but the fish may be just about any variety, including shark.

Q. Did Duncan Hines originate the cake mixes that bear his name?

A. No, what he originated was the publicity that made his name so widely known in the 1930s. He assembled guide books to better restaurants for sale to travelers. The man who made Duncan Hines even more famous was Roy H. Park, the original marketing brains behind the afore-mentioned cake mixes. In 1948, Park, now a chain newspaper owner, took just three weeks to engineer a takeover by Hines' mixes of 48 percent of the market.

GREEN HAIR

Am told acid rain through shallow wells has corroded copper plumbing in Sweden, and a lot of Swedish blonds now are running around with green hair. . . .

Shoppers used to be leery of grocery carts. Why I don't know. But many refused to use them back in the 1930s after Sylvan N. Goldman invented the first of same. So it was the job of the grocery boys in numerous markets not just to carry out the sacks, but to tag along with the shoppers, pushing their carts through the aisles as they picked out the goods.

The price of coffee in London once went up to the equivalent of $48 a pound. Even then, the city drank more coffee than anyplace else on earth.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The earliest part of the day is best for whatever is constructive in its nature, so utilize these hours to your advantage by reducing your goals to a successful plan of action.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sensible in handling personal matters in the morning and later you can set a new course of action that can gain you your aims.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Morning is fine for a new campaign of action to gain you personal longings; but this soon changes and later you can do fine.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get busy at your work and be efficient at it, though a partner could prove annoying. You may be tired and tense in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have new plans you want to get started, so do just that even if it means applying some extra effort.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You had better pay holiday bills now even if your mind is still on amusements, and be sensible about them.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Early handle some important association matter by first planning how to do it and then get in touch with those involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good day to get right to work even though your mind may be bent on having a good time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good morning to plan amusements for the days ahead and then be inspired anew to go on with some special talents you have.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get your home better arranged so that you can work more efficiently there and make a better impression on others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Early morning talks with partners is wise so that you can plan the future more wisely. Rest up this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A good day for handling practical affairs so get an early start and do so intelligently.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Think about your own wishes and how best to gain them with the assistance of a bigwig. Good friends will understand your needs.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will be very sensitive and should early be taught to be more objective so as not to have the feelings hurt so easily. One who will easily understand the needs and woes of others and want to be helpful to them, so slant the education along such lines of humanitarian endeavor.

Some mothers are generous letting adopted children know of identities

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I read with sadness the letter from "Devastated," who advocates hiding from adopted children the fact that they were adopted to prevent them from searching for their birth parents.

How sad that "Devastated" is so insecure as a parent. The fact that an adopted child may want to know a birth parent does not necessarily mean that the adoptive parent will be abandoned or replaced.

As the mother of an adopted daughter, I have often wished that her birth mother could see what a beautiful and happy child she is. If my daughter ever wants to find her birth mother, I will gladly help her. I love her enough to hold her with open arms.

— WILLING TO SHARE

DEAR WILLING: Your daughter is indeed lucky to have been placed in your arms. Not all adoptees are so fortunate. Nor are all adoptive parents as generous and secure as you. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: There is no good reason why adopted children should seek out their biological parents. A complete medical history is given to adoptive parents. They are also told something about the birth parents, although identities are never revealed.

Why is it necessary to pursue a relationship that, for a child, never existed? Does satisfying the curiosity of the adopted child justify the hurt to adoptive parents? They are the parents who raised those children.

They paid for braces, participation in sports, for party dresses and college educations. They are the parents who waited for their kids to get home safely from parties; and helped junior to buy his first car. They're the ones who will foot the bill for a big wedding if that's what Susie wants.

Suddenly today there's a curiosity among adopted kids demanding to know who the "birth parents" are, so the kids start searching. What a great thank-you to the parents who raised them!

To adopted kids I would say: "Be grateful. Show your mom and dad how much you love them, and forget the two strangers you've never even met!"

— ANONYMOUS PARENT

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an upwardly mobile executive. We recently moved to a new area and have been invited to the country club for lunch several times. We enjoyed these visits enormously and would like very much to join the club.

Now the problem: My husband and I are both born-again Moravian Baptists and take our religion very seriously. However, the inference has been made that unless we are Episcopalian, our chances for being accepted into the country club are non-existent. We were told that in this area Baptists are considered worse than "low church."

Could you please explain this concept of "low church" to me, Abby? Moravian Baptist churches are just as tall as any others I have seen.

CURIOUS IN DAYTON

DEAR CURIOUS: I'm also curious. Ask the person who made the remark about "low church" to explain it to you. Then explain it to me. I've never heard the expression.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send your name and address clearly printed with check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Alcohol, drug abuse linked to criminal acts

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Alcohol and drugs are used by a large precentage of students in four Magic Valley schools and by an equally large number of juveniles and adults who commit crimes in Twin Falls County, according to a fact sheet presented to a state committee on substance abuse.

The report contained information from Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl, Magistrate Judge Michael Redman, Twin Falls County Juvenile probation officer Jodie Hamilton, former Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Dennis Voorhees and Ruth Schneider, the youth counselor at the Port of Hope substance abuse treatment center.

It was presented earlier this month to the State Alcohol Intoxication Treatment Act committee, which is composed of representatives from the community and state agencies.

In the fact sheet was a survey by Schneider of four schools in the Magic Valley. The survey showed that many junior and high school-age students consumed alcohol or used drugs. Schneider, who would not release the names of the schools at the request of the schools, said the survey was conducted over the 1983-1984 school year.

Drugs or drink were directly or indirectly involved in 95 percent of all criminal cases — Survey

Of the 208 students questioned in one school, 187 students or 90 percent used alcohol and 58 students or 29 percent experimented with drugs. In another school where 118 students were surveyed, 44 of them or 37 percent used alcohol and 35 students used drugs. At a third school, 293 students were polled and 172 or 59 percent drank alcohol and 90 students used drugs. Of the 326 students surveyed in a fourth school, 273 or 84 percent drank and 155 used drugs.

Schneider says she wasn't surprised at the high number of students who had experimented with the intoxicants. Teachers and counselors at the schools said that a 50 percent use of the substances among students was a low estimate, Schenider adds.

Among juveniles offenders, 38 percent were using alcohol or drugs when arrested, according to Hamilton. She also reported that an average of five to six juveniles were arrested per week on charges of illegal possession of or illegal consumption of alcohol.

The use of alcohol or drugs also was high among adults in trouble with the law, according to the fact sheet information.

Meehl, one of two district judges in Twin Falls County, reported that among those people charged with felonies, 85 percent had alcohol or drug problems.

Redman, also a Twin Falls judge, added that 64 percent of all cases that came into his court directly involved alcohol or drugs. He made the observations from criminal and civil cases over a four-month period last year, Redman says.

In addition, every case of resisting arrest, assault and wifebeating that he has presided over was alcohol- or drug-related, Redman says.

Voorhees reported that drugs or drink were directly or indirectly involved in 95 percent of all criminal cases. In these cases a person was drinking at the time of the crime, drinking was a major part of their lifestyle or drinking problems were present in the home in which they were raised, Voorhees reported.

Included in the fact sheet was information from Marian Peterson, who heads the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce Crime Prevention Committee, which shows that drugs are big business.

Peterson reported that between March 1982 and October 1984, $1,108,345 worth of drugs were seized in arrests resulting from tips to the Crime Stoppers program.

While the statistics in the fact sheet reveal a lot of substance abuse, the courts do have programs to help meet the needs of those who abuse the use of liquor or drugs.

Twin Falls County magistrate judge often sentence those arrested for drunken driving to enroll in a drug awareness program offered by the Port of Hope. The program is called the Court Alcohol School. A similar program for juveniles arrested for drinking under age or using drugs was started about two months ago.

District and magistrate judges frequently order offenders to enroll in the Port of Hope or be evaluated for substance abuse problems.

Outside of the courtroom, Schnieder conducts a drug awareness program in schools.

The purpose of the State Alcohol Intoxication Act committee is to attempt to reach those in need of treatment for substance abuse problems. The committee meets its goal by referral and development of such programs, said Roberta Crockett of Pocatello, a member of the regional committee.

Trees' uses many

After holidays

By HAL BERNTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — This week, about 8,000 Christmas trees graced the homes of Twin Falls families.

However, when the holiday season ends, most will be unceremoniously hauled outside to await their final fate at the hands of the city's garbagemen.

But there are a few other uses for aging Christmas trees that are worth considering before dumping them in the trash.

Judy Ruprecht, a Prairie Falcon Audubon Society member, says that after New Year's Day, her family usually wraps the Christmas tree, along with several of the neighbors' trees, with goodies for the birds. The trees are then placed in the Ruprecht's backyard.

"We wrap the tree with cranberries and make sweet balls with suet, bird seed and peanut butter," Ruprecht says. "We usually put all the trees in a row because the birds feel a lot more secure when there is something for them to hide in."

By springtime, when the tree needles start looking yellow, the Ruprecht's usually dispose of the trees with a bonfire.

Terry Rich, a BLM Shoshone District biologist, says his family also puts its Christmas tree in the backyard, but he cautions people to make sure to first remove all of the tinsel and other inedible ornaments.

Rich says that an occasional tree placed on public lands might also provide good cover for a rabbit trying to escape the talons of a sharp-eyed eagle or hawk.

For those who want to send their tree to the dump, Parks and Sons, the Twin Falls city disposal firm, asks that trees longer than five and a half feet be cut in half. Otherwise, Parks and Sons will have difficulty handling the trees, says Joanne Etherington, a Parks and Sons spokeswoman.

Etherington says Parks and Sons will try to pick up most of the curbside trees within the next few weeks. But some delays may occurr because of the enormous volume of post-Christmas trash, she says.

"If people will just be a little patient, we will get to them, Etherington says.

After the trees are hauled away, they will be taken to a landfill site where they decompose and "return to where they came from," Etherington says.

Weather grounds travelers at airport

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With visibility at 50 miles and winds at a light 8 knots east-northeast, frustrated holiday travelers at Twin Falls airport sat grounded Wednesday.

Waiting for them in Salt Lake City was a soupy fog that allowed less than a half mile of visibility, shutting down the airport to most incoming flights and some departing flights through the morning and into the early afternoon.

"The fog is somewhat isolated, unfortunately it is isolated in the vicinity of the airport," said Salt Lake city airport operations manager Bern Case.

Control tower manager Larry Barry said he had never before seen a fog bank like the one that slowed down Salt Lake City operations.

"We expected it to dissipate, but a light wind kept bringing in fog off the lake," said Barry. A seeder plane shooting ice crystals to bring the fog to the ground in the form of snow or ice was hardly able to open the fog bank for a single plane at a time to land, he said.

Airport operations official Jerry Dewsnup said Wednesday evening that the fog thinned enough to allow landings by 2:30 p.m., but would continue to be a problem through the night.

Skywest airlines pilot Craig Drew said as many as 3,000 people might be affected by the fog bank. With about 8,700 passengers per day moving through the Salt Lake City airport, he said a slow morning there would likely affect most departures.

While FAA regulations require a half mile of visibility for landings, less than half that is needed for take-offs. "When you're coming in at over

BELL RAPIDS — Bell Rapids area residents have rallied to the cause of Jeff, Jill, and Jeremy Hudson, whose house burned to the ground Monday morning.

"Everything can be replaced, but it is sad to watch everything you've worked for burn," Hudson said Wednesday night.

Jeff's Mother, Carol, said Wednesday afternoon more than $1,000 in cash, a Volkswagen station wagon, toys and clothes for Jeremy, and food had been left at her house by friends and strangers alike to help the young couple to their feet.

Jeff says the car, complete with new tires, was donated by a local couple whom he doesn't even know personally. "People have been great," he says.

"There has been a tremendous response," Carol said.

Nellis Burkhart, Jill's father, says friends have left more than $100 in cash as well as bedding, clothes, kitchen ware, and some furnishings. He said toys for the Hudson's son, Jeremy, were dropped off the day of the fire.

"The day it happened they were both in bad shape, but they realized they had their health, it could have been much worse," Burkhart said.

Jeff's employer, Bruce Brown, will be out of town next week and Jeff will stay there. At Brown's house, a color television, blankets, and small appliances have been dropped off for the Hudsons.

Jeff said he will try to find a place in Hagerman at the Blue Spruce mobile home park.

Only 65 tracts sold at public auctions

BLM has bad luck finding buyers for Idaho lands

By HAL BERNTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The federal Bureau of Land Management tried to sell 110 tracts of Idaho public lands totalling 5,846 acres during the 1984 fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

But the agency could find buyers for only 65 of these tracts with a total of 2,174 acres, reports Clair Whitlock, BLM's Idaho director. The 2,174 acres — sold at public auctions — brought about $338,000 into federal coffers, says Whitlock.

These fiscal year totals represent the scaled-down 1984 version of a federal real estate program that was once a linchpin of President Reagan's ill-fated "asset-management" plan to help balance the federal budget through public land sales.

Under that plan, BLM officials initially proposed to sell 14,365 acres of Idaho public lands during fiscal year 1984 and up to 175,000 acres during what agency officials described as "the foreseeable future."

But the asset-mangement program was dropped by the Reagan Administration in 1983 after it ran into stiff opposition from both environmentalists and Western ranchers. BLM land sales have been scaled back substantially from the acreage levels predicted under the now defunct asset-mangement plan.

Most of the 1984 sale parcels were small, hard-to-manage, isolated tracts of grazing land that BLM officials believe could be better put to use by the private owners. However, land sales also included lake-side development tracts along Magic Reservoir north of Shoshone.

During the 1985 fiscal year, Whitlock says the Idaho BLM is offering about 4,200 acres of land for sale, including some tracts that attracted no buyers during the past fiscal year.

In the Shoshone District, BLM officials offered 630.53 acres of land for sale in 1984 and managed to sell 510.53 acres, according to Shoshone District real estate specialist Joe Aitken.

A county-by-county breakdown included a 320-acre sale in Camas County, a 13-acre sale in Blaine County and 177.5 acres in Lincoln County.

Aitken says that the 1985 fiscal year sales started with the successful Dec. 14 sale of six tracts totalling 239 acres in Gooding County. All of these tracts sold for well above their appraised values, with one tract appraised at $4,000 selling for $8,035, he says.

Buyers were mainly "people who wanted the land for residential use or want to expand existing (ranching) operations," Aitken says.

Nationally, BLM attempted to sell 55,000 acres of land, according to the December edition of the Public Lands Institute newsletter. The agency managed to find buyers for only 19,500 of these acres, collecting $12,441,114 in sale revenues, the newsletter reports.

If the holiday boredom blues have everybody down

Frustrated parents can find activities for vacationing kids

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Whew . . . you can breathe a tentative sigh of relief: Christmas vacation is halfway over.

In another six days, the kids wailing, "But Mom, there's nothing to do," will be back in school with plenty to do.

In the meantime, if you want a little relief you do have a few options.

Among the best is the YFCA Vacation Fun Club. Parents can drop their children off today, Friday or Monday at 8 a.m. and pick them up at 5:30 p.m. after a day's activities guaranteed to take the edge off the children's energy, if not completely exhaust them.

Besides the swimming, arts and crafts and other activities scheduled daily, the kids will spend much of Thursday innertubing, Friday at the movies and Monday roller skating.

The program costs $7 a child with discounts for brothers and sisters. Children should bring a sack lunch.

Another option that keeps kids out of the house for a full day is a jaunt to Soldier Mountain, Pomerelle or Magic Mountain Ski Resorts. You can leave the driving to bus drivers hired for the Christmas holidays.

The bus to Magic Mountain leaves the K-Mart parking lot at 8:30 a.m. and is back around 5:30 p.m.

The bus to Pomerelle leaves a half hour earlier from the same parking lot and is back about 6:30 p.m. Cost is $4 for the ride.

Kids can catch the bus to Soldier Mountain at Newton's Sport Center at 7:15 a.m. It also costs $4. Parents can pick up their children about 5:30 or 6 p.m.

Children can also work off a little energy at local bowling alleys and the skating rink. Both Twin Falls bowling alleys and most in the valley are open daily.

Skateland is open from 1 to 4 every weekday afternoon during the vacation with games of limbo and balloon popping scheduled in addition to skating. An afternoon costs $1.50. The rink will also be open until the wee hours of the morning New Year's Eve for a children's party costing $5 a skater.

If you don't mind the drive to Sun Valley, ice skating is another option. Sun Valley Skating is open during the day and rents skates to fit tots through adults.

Sligars Thousand Springs Resort in Hagerman will also be open some days during the vacation, but closed New Year's Eve and New Year's Day. Because the schedule is not firm yet, it would be wise to call the resort before planning a swim.

The YFCA pool will also be open weekday afternoons through Monday from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. for public swimming. Cost is $1.

Local movie theaters are showing several matinees daily this week to appeal to anyone from those in kindergarten to college students home on vacation.

But if it is something free you are looking for, the Twin Falls Public Library remains the best bargain in town.

It's open 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. today, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and noon to 5 p.m. on Saturday. Also scheduled on Saturday at 2 p.m. is a program for grade school children, "The Spirit of Giving."

Children may bring a favorite gift or drawing and will receive a book of blank coupons for giving away whatever service the children chose.

Kimberly principal has surgery

KIMBERLY — James McClellan, 46, the principal of Kimberly High School, is in critical condition in a Boise hospital after undergoing surgery Wednesday.

He was admitted at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center on Saturday and later transferred to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

Jeep stolen from auto dealer

TWIN FALLS — Car thieves in Twin Falls have apparently decided the best place to get a car is from a car dealer, police said Wednesday.

While the investigation of the theft of a 1985 Corvette from the show room of Ace Hansen's Cheyrolet last week is still being investigated, Latham Motors on Second Ave. S., in Twin Falls reported a missing Jeep. The vehicle was later found abandoned and burned.

Police were told Wednesday that between Saturday and Wednesday morning, someone drove the 1981 cloth-topped Jeep from a parking spot near the Latham Motor Co. building. Represenatives of the agency said the keys may have been left in the vehicle.

Wednesday the Twin Falls Sheriff's Office received a call about a Jeep that had been burned and abandoned on a canal bank south of Twin Falls. City police confirmed it is the missing vehicle, valued a $8,995.

Officers in Twin Falls said they have found no traces of the $30,500 Corvett that was taken from the display room at the local agency last weekend.

Canal stockholders to meet

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Canal Co. will hold its annual stockholders meeting on Jan. 8 at the College of Southern Idaho's Vocational-Technical building.

The meeting will be called to order at 10:30 a.m. and include discussions of the Jackson Lake Dam renovation, efforts to obtain a federal Rehabilitation and Betterment loan for the Twin Falls Canal system, status reports on the condition of Milner Dam, and reports on the Milner and Low Line power projects.

At the meeting, stockholders will also elect two members of the canal company board of directors.

Stockholders may vote at polls located at the Twin Falls Canal Co. office, 163 2nd Ave. West. The polls will open at 12 p.m. and close at 6 p.m.

Triplets' mother resting well

TWIN FALLS — Susan Paul was resting in good condition at Cassia County Memorial Hospital Wednesday as her surprise triplets continued to do well in the infant intensive care unit at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

The Paul triplets were born eight weeks early on Christmas Eve and had fooled doctors, who predicted Mrs. Paul would give birth to twins.

Dr. Paul V. Miles said the two boys are still on respirators, being given an air mixture with higher than room air levels of oxygen. The girl is not on a respirator, he said.

100 miles per hour, you've got to be able to see a little bit," Drew said.

Skywest station manager Mike Turner said most airlines would honor their delayed passengers' tickets on later flights. "You can't be after every dollar," Turner said.

Drew said Skywest had seven flights that didn't get in to Salt Lake City and Turner said 20 of 25 Western Airlines flights into Salt Lake City were diverted to other airstrips or turned back to where they left from. Travelers faced the same predicament north of Twin Falls, where Sun Valley aviation reported all of its flights had been diverted into Ogden, Utah.

"When Salt Lake goes down, this is what happens," said Turner, surveying the group of about 20 passengers standing and sitting in various postures of boredom around the waiting area.

Judy Green of Jerome arrived for a 7 a.m. Skywest flight that was only the first leg of her return trip to Greenville, N.C., where she was scheduled to work Wednesday night.

For Twin Falls native Elaine Rodseth, the delay was cutting into vacation rather than adding to it. Salt Lake was her first step on a two-week trip to Minneapolis to visit relatives.

The delay meant a morning of connections would be impossible, he said, canceled appointments for Briarf Katz, a Salt Like city attorney who had been visiting his parents in Twin Falls.

"I come in at 7 a.m., I should be high on the waiting list," said Twin Falls eighth-grader Ian Robertson. Robertson's Skywest flight took off for Salt Lake two hours late, circled over Ogden and then headed back to Twin Falls without finding a break in the clouds.

"There were solid clouds, it looked like snow at first," Roberston said. With Salt Lake the first leg of a trip to Champaign, Ill., he said he would only wait until 3 p.m. After that, his connections would be impossible, he said.

Sun Valley businesses ready for option tax

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — About two-thirds of the businesses subject to Ketchum's new local option tax have submitted applications for a permit needed when the sales tax goes into effect New Year's Day.

The city has received about 200 applications for the permit to conduct business in Ketchum from retail and other businesses that must collect the 1 percent or 2 percent tax approved by city voters in November, says Jim Jaquet, city administrator.

Jaquet says the city is still waiting to hear from the other 100 or so known businesses that have not yet applied for the permit.

"I expect it's going to be the same thing as with the beer and wine licenses. It always comes down to the last hour," he says.

The new taxing structure places a 1 percent tax on most general retail sales items and 2 percent tax on rooms rented on a short-term basis and bar drinks. It exempts the sale of groceries, automobiles and wholesale lumber.

It replaces a 5 percent tax on rented rooms and bar drinks, a tax structure that collecters bitterly opposed because they said it was too high and affected visitors' attitudes about the resort area.

Jaquet says the city has made a number of efforts to reach those businesses that must collect the tax.

It mailed applications to all businesses that collected the state sales tax in the past and sent canvassers door-to-door in the business and light industrial districts.

Each business has been given an application for the business permit, a copy of the city ordinance creating the tax, a collection book and a schedule for either the 1 percent or 2 percent tax.

The city made the permit free so getting it would be more palatable to businesses, Jaquet says.

"I think we have done our job in getting the message out," he says.

Beginning Jan. 2, the city will warn those businesses without permits that they are violating the law and violators will be turned over to the county prosecutor, Jaquet says.

Although non-compliance is a misdemeanor, it carries a penalty of up to 1 year in the county jail, a $300 fine or both.

Jaquet says the city will use the tax money for services that affect tourists, such as snow plowing and the operation of the city-operated bus system.

He says the city recognizes the tax will create extra paperwork for those involved in collecting it although all those businesses already are subject to the state sales tax.

However, he says, businesses collecting the tax will be directly affected by the services it will make possible because many will be directed to the downtown business district, he says.

"At least the city's sales tax is kept locally — and not sent away to the state — and provides a service that the businesses can directly feel," Jaquet says.

The city will collect the tax knowing it may lose it in the near future.

Fifth District Judge George Granata Jr. recently ruled that the state law that allows the tax is unconstitutional in a case brought by the Sun Valley Co. against the city of Sun Valley, which has a similar tax.

Ketchum, however, is not affected by that ruling until the Idaho Supreme Court reaches a decision on the city of Sun Valley's appeal of Granata's ruling.

Hanukkah is a holiday too

Area Jews celebrate in own way

By INA HADAM
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — While Christians were celebrating Christmas in their traditional ways, Marlene and Harry Weed were lighting candles.

The Weeds, who are recent newcomers to the area, started their holiday celebration by lighting one candle the evening of Dec. 18, which is the first day of Hanukkah, a Jewish religious holiday.

Hanukkah is further celebrated by lighting two candles the next night, three candles the next night and so on for eight days, symbolic of the eight days blessed oil burned until more could be purified.

Marlene says the Hanukkah celebration is based on a war of independence the Jewish people fought against the Syrians about 168 B.C.E.

Harry interrupts to explain that the term B.C.E. (Before Common Era) is the term the Jewish people use to denote the same time frame as the Christian term B.C. (Before Christ).

The Syrian ruler Antiochus was insisting that all children be raised in the Greek culture, explains Marlene. She says the Jewish people, who were known as Maccabean, were actually fighting for religious freedom.

According to the legend, she continues, when the battle was over and the Maccabeans once again had possession of their temple, it had been defiled and only one small bottle of specially prepared ritual oil was found that had not been desecrated. It appeared to be only enough oil to burn for one day, but it miraculously burned for eight days until the temple could be cleansed and more oil could be purified, she says.

Many Christians think this Jewish holiday is the one that most closely

Homeowners can seek exemptions

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Qualified property owners in Magic Valley will be able to sign up, beginning next week, for two special classifications of tax exemption, and officials say residents would be wise to make certain they are on the list for the available breaks.

Jerome County Assessor Marjorie DuBois urged residential property owners to register for the homeowners exemption, which provides an exemption on 50 percent of the property value or $50,000, whichever is smaller.

She said homeowners must file for exemptions between Jan. 2 and June 17.

This exemption is made available on all residential property, whether it is in a city or on a farm. Farmers may file on that portion of their property value that is represented by their home. Each homeowner is allowed only one exemption in the state and it must be on the home he or she owns and designates as the primary dwelling of the taxpayer.

Twin Falls County officials emphasize that to qualify for the exemption, the property must be owned and occupied by the taxpayer. Residential rental properties are not eligible for the exemption.

Representatives of the assessor's office in Twin Falls say most homeowners do file for the exemption, and that since it is available it should be utilized.

Assessors say the homeowner exemption is not meant to be a low tax rate for residential property as properties are assessed at full market value. Instead, it is a costly error for homeowners who neglect to take advantage of the opportunity to qualify for the exemption.

Tax levies, say assessors, are set to take the exemption into consideration and at the same time bring in the necessary amount of revenue to the county's taxing agencies. This often displeases business property owners and the residential property owners who cannot qualify for the 50 percent exemption.

Depending on what the Idaho Legislature does in the upcoming session, assessors say filing for exemption now through June 17 will hold the property tax bill to a reasonable level.

Were the exemptions lifted, assessors say, tax levies would have to be reduced since they are set to raise a specific amount of money for each county. In the event the exemption is abandoned by the Legislature, residential property owners would pay a somewhat larger share of the overall tax bill in the counties.

DuBois explained that once a homeowner signs up for the exemption, it is not necessary to sign up every year. Only when an individual moves, buys and occupies a new piece of property or otherwise changes the address, is a new filing required.

If the property owner has remodeled or expanded the dwelling, it is still not necessary to file for the exemption again, unless the address is changed or the home is no longer the residence of the taxpayer.

"If you received the exemption last year and still occupy the same home, you do not need to file again," DuBois said. "If you have any questions about the exemption, you should call your assessor."

It will also be time, beginning Jan. 2, for persons 65 years of age and older who are on limited income, to sign up for the circuit breaker property tax exemption. For this exemption, the deadline is earlier. Persons must file for circuit breaker relief by April 15. This is a county reduction in property taxes depending on the needs and qualifications of each individual taxpayer.

"A lot of people confuse these two exemptions," said Mary Gates of the Twin Falls Assessor's office.

"You have to sign up every year for the circuit breaker tax program," she said.

St. Benedict's obtains grant for elders

By CAROLYN MILLER
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — St. Benedict's Family Medical Center in Jerome, has received a "Growing Younger" grant to develop a program to promote better health among persons 55 years of age and older.

Celeste Hinzman, a registered nurse and adult practioner at St. Benedicts who applied for the grant, will serve as program co-ordinator for developing the program.

"I received a tremendous amount of support and interest in the program while gathering information for the grant," says Hinzman. She says everyone felt a wellness and health education program for senior adults was needed.

Hinzman says the "Growing Younger" program was originally developed by Healthwise, Inc., in Boise and the Boise Council on Aging. She says the program is now available in 18 states nationwide.

Hinzman says the first of the Growing Younger workshops would probably begin in February.

"The object of the program," says Hinzman, "is to provide an early intervention program to promote positive health behavior among older adults."

Hinzman says most adults 65 and older are responsible for three times the per capita health care costs of all other adults. She says these costs are due mainly to diseases which are related to health behavior.

The primary sponsor of the Growing Younger program in Jerome is St. Benedict's Family Medical Center, with Dr. James E. Sloat as medical advisor. Hinzman says the program is also sponsored by the Area Four Agency on Aging in Twin Falls, the Department of Health and Welfare in Jerome, Tupperware, the Jerome Senior Citizens Center and the Jerome Recreational Districts.

The Growing Younger program includes four, two-hour workshops which cover physical fitness, nutrition, stress management and medical self care.

Hinzman says one of the most valuable aspects of the Growing Younger program is the evaluation and testing questionnaire that monitors changes in health behavior.

An extensive health assessment is taken the first week of the program and again six months after graduation. The health measurements include weight, flexibility, lung function, cholesterol, percent body fat, blood pressure and resting pulse.

Hinzman says results evaluated from these tests given to senior adults who completed the program in Boise indicate the participants began exercising more, eating better foods, increasing stress management and social activities and improving their management of health care problems. She says over 1,000 Boise seniors participated in the workshops during a 30-month period.

"One of the most rewarding activities formed as a result of the Boise program," says Hinzman, "is the group of senior adults who walk three to eight miles, three times a week. They have tagged themselves the "Happy Hoofers" and their group size often exceeds 50 persons," relates Hinzman.

The program will be offered for $6 per person, $10 per couple or $1.50 per session, and will be held at the Jerome Senior Citizen Center.

Man killed, four hurt in head-on collision

GOODING -- One man was killed and four persons injured in a head-on collision on State Highway 46 Wednesday afternoon.

Gooding County sheriff's officers identified the dead man as Andrew Manuel Abundis, 23, of Twin Falls. Deputy Sheriff Steve Lawrason said Abundas, a passenger in a car driven by Adolph Ruiz, 31, of Jerome died at the scene. The Gooding Fire Department was called to the scene to cut open the cab of the pickup truck in order to remove the body. The officer said Abundis was dead at the scene.

The injured people included Lillian Osborne, 75, of Gooding, driver of the second vehicle. Lawrason said the woman's northbound car crossed the center line of the highway and struck the southbound Ruiz vehicle almost head-on. He said it had not been determined if the woman "blacked out," was preparing to pass another car or was in the wrong lane of traffic for some other reason.

The other injured people were identified by sheriff's officers as Lanny Harmon, 33, of Corral, Savina Lail, 28, no address given, and Ruiz. All four of the injured people were transported to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center in Jerome by ambulance where Ruiz was treated and released. The others were later transferred to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Hospital officials said Harmon, Lail, also listed as Savina Harmon, and Osborne were still being evaluated late Wednesday evening but were all admitted with serious injuries.

The accident occurred about four miles south of Gooding.

While farmers resolve to give it up, inside they cherish it

Diana Hooley
Country neighbors

The alcoholic resolves to quit drinking, the chain smoker resolves to quit smoking and the farmer to quit farming — if he doesn't make any money this year. Weren't these the same New Year's resolutions as last year?

It's hard to break nurtured habits.

But farming is much more soul-gripping than a mere habit. The nature of farming is such that it is not only life-consuming, like a bad habit, but it is also life-giving. That's the hook. That's the reason the past few years that we have witnessed farmers mortgaging everything but their families to stay in business. Farmers love the farm lifestyle.

Hard work, odd hours, low exposure and uncertain wages aside, farming is an enjoyable way of living. Most farmers think so. Just ask them. You'll find them in coveralls and slogan farm caps mulling around farm auctions and sale rings this time of year.

There is a feeling of brotherhood at these places as farmers stand around the sale yards, kicking stones and talking about the price of cows and who has what for sale — cheap of course.

Cheap is the clarion call for this farm generation. You can say tractor, and you can say John Deere, and you can say new. But if you don't say cheap, you can walk away without a deal.

The brotherhood talk at the sale ring continues at the local watering hole. For farmers that's the coffee shop. Winter coffee-shopping is a nice part of the lifestyle.

Farmers stroll into these restaurants wearing manure-crusted boots like a badge symbolizing the integrity of hard work.

On cold days, they coffee-shop all morning. Farmers have that freedom. A lot of business is performed over a bottomless cup of coffee. It's a time for meandering over a mountain of choices and sharing the decision-making process with other farmers.

The farmer is his own boss. Maybe that's why the job has had such a high mortality rate lately. Or at least that's what the farm analysts have been saying. The analysts say the problems are poor farm management. Farmers say the problems are low crop prices. Maybe they are both right.

But the fact is, when you are a farm boss, you have to know how to do much more than plow a field. Some farm bosses don't like this part. But all farm bosses like the independence part. It's another fringe benefit of the farm lifestyle.

Coffee-shopping, making your own choices and decisions, and being independent are all parts of farm business. But what really separates farmers from any other business and provides the glue in these hard times is the land.

Scarlet O'Hara, vowing her allegiance to the land against the backdrop of a setting sun in "Gone With the Wind," is no less dramatic than the yearly refinancing by struggling farmers.

A farmer's love for his land is the embodiment of the farm lifestyle. Any farmer will tell you one of the sweetest smells on the earth is that of the earth.

The desire to turn the land and plant the seed will return every spring, even if the farmer himself cannot. Many farmers today are not living the lifestyle of the rich and famous but of the poor and huppy. And some are poor and not so happy.

God willing, this new year these farmers will continue to enjoy their cherished farm lifestyle.

Barton re-elected to national board of swine group

By MICHELE SNYDER
Times-News correspondent

PAUL — This has been a winning year for Lyle Barton, who was recently re-elected to two offices.

Barton has served on the Minidoka County Board of Commissioners since 1973 and kept his seat in the November elections. And this month he was elected to a second term as a member of the national board of directors for the United Duroc Swine Association.

Barton says he is one of 11 directors across the nation and that he represents the northwest region.

"I had always hoped to serve on the board, because I have been a promoter of purebred livestock for several years," said Barton, who regularly sells his swine in national shows.

"In my wildest dreams, I never thought I would have the privilege of serving on the board," says Barton. He adds that the northwest region had no representative until six years ago.

Barton is the second man to serve on the board for this region in the last six years.

"I was humbled that I survived another term" he said, adding that there are no politics involved with this election.

"The only people who vote are those who have registered purebred animals within the last year" he said.

Barton said owners of the registered purebreds are sent ballots and no campaigning is involved.

As a board member, Barton is required to attend four meetings a year thoughout the nation, one of which is at the UDSA headquarters in Peoria, Ill.

At the meetings, procedures and regulations for the breed contests are set.

"We are negotiating now on requests that two other breeds be able to come in and use the Duroc facilities," said Barton.

Barton farms 260 acres of land northwest of Paul where he raises sugar beets and grain along with his prized swine.

Smoking bills may burn this session

BOISE (AP) — Many a political compromise has been worked out in a smoke-filled room. But that's not likely to happen at the Idaho Legislature this winter.

The battle over indoor air pollution — smoking in offices and restaurants — probably will take place on the House floor, with plenty of argument about the government's right to legislate private business.

Members of the Idaho Lung Association say citizens are entitled to freedom from tobacco smoke. The Idaho Innkeepers Association says that may be so, but decisions about splitting places into smoking and non-smoking sections should be left to business owners.

The lung association plans to champion a bill [illegible] Rep. Jerry Reilly, D-Nampa, which would ban smoking in elevators. The measure also would set up non-smoking sections in waiting rooms, public buildings, and restaurants that serve more than 30 people.

"It seems to get closer every year," said state Tax Commissioner Darwin Young, who sponsored [illegible] bill as a legislator in 1975.

"We didn't get very far with it," he said. "But it seems like the public is getting more adamant about it every year. ... More and more the public is demanding a smoke-free atmosphere."

Restrictions on offices were cut from Reilly's bill before it passed the Senate last year. It was introduced to the House Agriculture Committee with two weeks left on the legislative calendar, and died in the last-minute rush of more pressing and less politically sensitive business.

Bill Roden, a Boise attorney who represents the American Tobacco Institute and the Idaho Innkeepers Association, is determined to see any new measures meet similar fates during the 1985 session.

"It's been a battle every year. They're not going to be content until they just eliminate smoking," Roden said. "As long as it's an adult practice, it's going to happen. Common courtesy is going to have to take care of it."

Bill Smith, the lung association's executive director, says his organization took heart when the bill passed the Senate, but can't be sure whether another proposal will even be that successful during the coming Legislature. Republicans now hold a veto-proof lock on both chambers, and they tend to support business interests more than their Democratic counterparts.

"We're not trying to write a bill that says there will be no smoking in public places," Smith said. "But because two-thirds of Americans are non-smokers, they should have a right to relatively clean air."

Two schools hit by blazes

LAPWAI (AP) — One elementary school was destroyed and another was damaged by fire of undetermined origin early Wednesday, according to the Nez Perce County Sheriff's Department.

One school housing grades kindergarten through 3 was totally destroyed, officals said. The blaze in the other school housing grades 4 through 6 broke out about three hours later, authorities said. Several classrooms were badly damaged in the second fire.

The state fire marshal has been called into help the Bureau of Indian Affairs investigate the blazes.

Principal Robert Sobotta said the fires will put pressure on the district for temporary housing for about 200 students from the building that was destroyed and about 50 from the other structure. Sobotta said administrators will be looking to churches, Grange halls and other buildings for housing the remainder of the school year.

Sobotta estimated that the building housing the fourth through sixth grades sustained between $5,000 and $10,000 damage.

Hanukkah

approximates Christmas. But it only does so in the time of the year that it is celebrated, Marlene says.

The celebration of Hanukkah is based on the lunar calendar and does occur at nearly the same time as Christmas, which is the only similarity, she adds.

Marlene says there are eight other holidays during the year when Jewish people give their children gifts. She says different gifts are given for each holiday, with coins often being given at Hanukkah.

Giving gifts at holidays is a matter of choice, says Marlene, who adds that "Hanukkah has become a gift-giving occasion because we are in America and Christmas is a pretty overpowering presence here."

Marlene says "It is pretty much business as usual" during Hanukkah. But she adds there is a blessing used while lighting the candles:

As we mark the days when, in ancient times, our people
Fought for freedom against the tyrant's rod, we know
That one great sky of time arches over us:
For yet again, before our own eyes, has our people
Defended its freedom.

And we know that one sky of kinship arches over us
Here in the safety of our own homes
And over the children of Israel in their endangered homes.
Many, we know, are the children of Israel whose loved ones,
Fallen on the field, will not watch them light these candles.

So do we kindle them now
With a fire of love and oneness:
So do we resolve to keep their flame lit
In the Hanukkah of our hearts
Through all the days and nights
Of our lives.

In keeping with family tradition, Weed finds herself baking the challah bread that is a tradition for the Jewish Sabbath, which begins when the sun goes down Friday evening and continues until sundown on Saturday.

In larger communities, she says, there usually would be a bakery where it could be bought.

The Weeds are originally from Kansas City, Kans., where Harry practiced law for many years. The community they lived in there was about half Jewish and Marlene says their four daughters grew up thinking half the world was Jewish. She says they had no problems in giving the children a solid religious background.

From Kansas City, the family moved to Los Angeles, where both parents were employed in the motion picture industry. She says the children attended a Hebrew day school, so again there were no problems in keeping their traditions and religion.

During their time in Los Angeles, Marlene, who was recently defeated in her bid for the Jerome County prosecutor's position, studied law.

She says she wanted a career and felt law would give the family flexibility and the opportunity for them to move to a more rural setting.

"I like people from rural areas because they have the same sense of values that we have. It was almost like coming home to come to Jerome," she says.

But living in the small Jerome community where there is no synagogue, she admits, has made it a little more difficult to carry out the rituals of their religion.

However, Marlene says Judaism is a "transportable religion since many of the observances are done in the home only, rather than the synagogue."

'Long' gains help Iowa drill Texas

Ohio State players cut from team — C3

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Iowa quarterback Chuck Long passed for 461 yards and six touchdowns — both school records — as the Hawkeyes overwhelmed 19th-ranked Texas 55-17 Wednesday night in the inaugural Freedom Bowl football game at Anaheim Stadium.

Long, a 6-foot-4, 202-pound junior, shrugged off a slow start and a driving rain to complete 29 of his 39 passes to help the Hawkeyes of the Big Ten Conference finish their season with an 8-4-1 mark. The 29 completions represented another school record.

The six touchdown passes is believed to be the most ever in a bowl game, bettering the five scoring throws of Florida State's Steve Tensi in a 36-19 victory by the Seminoles over Oklahoma in the Gator Bowl on Jan. 2, 1965.

Texas, a member of the Southwest Conference, wound up 7-4-1 after allowing the second-highest single-game point total in school history and the most since 1904 when the University of Chicago beat the Longhorns 68-0.

A crowd of only 24,093 attended the game, which was televised locally as well as nationally. There was no announcement as to how many tickets were sold.

The size of the crowd was undoubtedly held down by the rain, which began some three hours before the kickoff and continued throughout the game.

Anaheim Stadium has a seating capacity of 69,007. Bowl officials announced earlier in the week that about 30,000 tickets had been sold.

Long was unsuccessful on his first four passes, but he picked the Texas secondary apart after that. He had one streak of 11 straight completions beginning early in the second quarter and ending early in the third period.

The Hawkeyes clinched the victory by scoring 31 points in the first 12:41 of the third quarter to turn a precarious 24-17 lead into an insurmountable 55-17 advantage. Neither team was able to score after that.

Long fired touchdown passes of six yards to Jonathon Hays and 11 yards to Mike Flagg in the first quarter to give the Hawkeyes a 14-0 lead.

After Tom Nichol booted a 35-yard field goal early in the third period, Long threw scoring passes of 33 yards to Bill Happel, 49 yards to Robert Smith, four yards to Scott Helverson and 15 yards to Hayes in a span of less than 10 minutes.

In the third quarter alone, Long completed 12 of his 14 passes for 241 yards and the four touchdowns.

The Longhorns scored all their points in the second quarter, getting an 11-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Scott Dodge to Bill Boy Bryant, a 1-yard scoring throw from Dodge to William Harris and a 46-yard field goal by Jeff Ward.

A 27-yard field goal by Nichol on the final play of the half gave the Hawkeyes their seven-point advantage at the intermission. Fred Bush scored the only Iowa touchdown Long didn't account for, tallying on a 1-yard plunge in the second quarter.

Aloha, Eagles

CSI cagers to play in Hawaii

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's basketball team — and a lot of fans — will be spending about eight days in Hawaii.

The basketball team will play a couple of games but it remains moot how many of the fans will watch them.

Coach Fred Trenkle's crew will take on the Armed Forces All-Stars and the Marine All-Stars Jan. 2 and 3, but maybe not in that order. The Eagles will be part of two doubleheaders.

"It's just about impossible to get a college game over there any more and it is amazing how many college basketball teams go to Hawaii every year," Trenkle said.

"Chaminade (which CSI defeated four times before it went big time) won't play a junior college any more. Why should they? They just finished playing Louisville," he noted.

Of course, University of Hawaii used to provide some of the funding for CSI to make the trip and play its junior varsity. Hawaii used it as a recruiting tool and did secure some CSI players after they left Twin Falls.

"But everyone wants to go to Hawaii now. They like the holiday break and the trip is a pretty good recruiting tool. Hawaii probably could schedule 90 games against the class programs of the country and never have to leave its home court," Trenkle said.

Trenkle said he has no idea what to expect from the opposition.

"I know the Armed Forces All-Stars have a solid program. There is very little changeover from year-to-year. They keep the team intact and play about 80 games. They should be very good," he said.

"The Marine All-Stars, as I understand it, take the best from tryouts among the marines on the islands. There is more changeover there. Sometimes they are very strong, other times not so strong. It just depends on who's stationed there at the time.

"Other than that we don't know anything about them but we're definitely going over," he said with a smile.

The CSI entourage will leave Friday morning and will not return until Jan. 4. Some of the fans will not be returning until Jan. 6.

First Cassia County cage tourney begins Friday

BURLEY — The first annual Cassia County Holiday classic gets underway at 6:15 p.m. Friday night at the Burley High School gymnasium.

The Oakley Hornets will take on Raft River's Trojans in the first game with Burley and Declo colliding about 8 p.m. in the nightcap. First-night losers will play for consolation honors at 6:15 p.m. Saturday with the Friday night winners going for the title in the final game.

On the face of it, the tournament appears to favor the host Burley Bobcats but Coach Gary Swan is having none of that. The Bobcats are A-2 this year and apparently headed for A-1 next year while Declo is A-3 and Oakley and Raft River are A-4.

Part of the reason Swan doesn't feel as confident as most coaches would in his position is "we are a young team and we plan on using the younger players a lot in this tournament," he says.

He said there are two major reasons for that decision. The first is "as a class our seniors are shooting 32 percent and our juniors 43 percent," the coach reports. "We simply haven't been getting enough points. You can't expect a younger and usually smaller defense to be able to hold A-1 and strong A-2 teams to 50 points or less. So you have to improve your own scoring output if you can."

The other is that if the juniors can accomplish the job — or at least equal it — nothing is particularly lost this year and the benefit of the experience could pay bigger dividends next year.

One thing Burley can rest assured on, Declo is looking forward to playing this game.

"We've played their program from the lower grades up through junior high and Declo has been pretty competitive against this group," says Coach Ron Knowles. "At least our players think so. They're ready to play."

Looking at it from a coaching standpoint, Knowles said, "We feel we match up with them quickness-wise. They are a little bigger at a couple of positions than we are but it isn't a great disadvantage to us."

He said he felt a central key to Declo's chances will be "to counteract their press. They play it pretty well."

Several Big Sky cage clubs in tourneys

By The Associated Press

Several Big Sky Conference basketball teams will wrap up 1984 at tournaments in Idaho, Nevada and Ohio this week while two other league schools take on West Coast teams, and a third plays host to a Texas squad.

Boise State hosts the two-day Real Dairy Gem State Classic, which opens on Friday and will end with a contest between Big Sky rivals Boise State and Idaho State.

Nevada-Reno hosts the Wolf Pack Classic on Friday and Saturday, with opening action between Colorado State and Cal State-Fullerton.

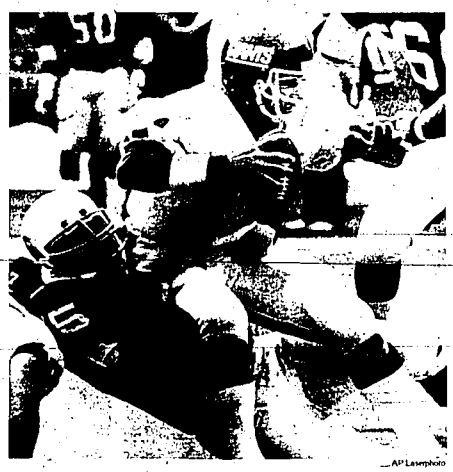

In other tournament play, Idaho will be at the Blade City Classic in Toledo, Ohio, and Northern Arizona travels to Billings, Mont., for the KOA Classic.

Pre-arranged competition at the Real Dairy tournament matches the College of Idaho and Idaho State for the opening game Friday night, followed by Northwest Nazarene and Boise State. On Saturday, the College of Idaho takes on Northwest Nazarene and Boise State plays Idaho State. Northwest Nazarene and C of I both are NAIA independents.

"Of course, when the Broncos and the Bengals get together, it's always a battle," BSU Coach Bobby Dye said. Dye, in his second season directing the Broncos, said he expects Idaho State to "give us problems because of their great quickness and aggressive style of play."

Boise State scored a 67-55 victory over Wyoming last weekend and is 5-3 for the season, while Idaho State's last game saw the Bengals defeated 26-13 by Utah State. Idaho State is

This was one of just two sacks Phil Simms suffered Sunday

Giants' QB commands respect

49ers remain wary of Simms

More on playoffs — C3

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Phil Simms' 290 yards passing against San Francisco back in October were hardly noticed.

But the 49ers' defense doesn't want to risk another such performance by the quarterback on Saturday when the New York Giants visit Candlestick Park for a National Football League playoff game.

"It looks like their offense is much improved since we played them," said San Francisco linebacker Dan Bunz. "Phil Simms isn't just trying to go downfield now. He's looking for the short and medium passes, too."

Almost all of Simms' passing success in the Oct. 8 game at Giants Stadium came after his team was in a 21-0 hole. The 49ers scored two touchdowns on Joe Montana passes and a third on Dana McLemore's 79-yard punt return before the game was eight minutes old.

The 49ers made their record 6-0 by winning 31-10, and it was one of their best showings in a 15-1 season.

Most of the Giants' fans went home early that night in October, booing Simms and his teammates loudly before leaving.

"It's a long season, so we don't have to give up yet," Simms said at the time.

He was intercepted twice in the game and sacked four times in the loss which left the Giants' record at 3-3. When the long regular season ended, the Giants were in the playoffs with a 9-7 record and Simms had passed for 4,044 yards, becoming only the eighth quarterback in NFL history to reach the 4,000-yard mark.

Back in 1979, when Coach Bill Walsh was just a few months into his new challenge of rebuilding the 49ers, he had Simms rated as the top quarterback prospect in college football. The Giants did, too, and chose the passer from Morehead State in the first round of the NFL draft. The 49ers, who had no first round pick, got Montana as a third-round bargain.

The Giants advanced to this weekend's rematch with the 49ers by upsetting the Los Angeles Rams 16-13 in last Sunday's National Conference wild-card game at Anaheim, Calif. Simms completed 22 of 31 passes, mostly to running backs and tight end Zeke Mowatt, for 179 yards and was not intercepted in the game.

"We'll have to protect against the long pass with Simms. He throws a lot of passes 25 and 30 yards downfield," Walsh says. "The Rams are the type of team you have to throw a lot of short passes against."

"Maybe we are, too."

Simms was sacked 55 times for 434 yards in losses during the regular season. But the Rams got to him just twice.

"If Simms gets the time he needs to get rid of the ball, he could make it a long day for us," defensive back Ronnie Lott of the 49ers says.

It was an awfully long night for the Giants the last time they faced the 49ers.

"We've got a chance to see how much we've improved," running back Rob Carpenter says.

Jackson fits in quite well for Boise St.

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BOISE — Frank Jackson is Coach Bobby Dye's kind of player.

That's him over there, pulling down the weak-side rebound, or there, with his hand in the face of the other team's best shooter. Last year, he played Earl Monroe to Vince Hinchen's Walt Frazier, and all but invisibly at times.

By season's end, however, Jackson ended up either first, second or third in every individual statistical category at Boise State except rebounding and blocked shots. He was only the 25th-most proficient scorer in the Big Sky Conference last year, but in field goal shooting percentage he ranked fifth. He was also ninth in the league in assists, averaging almost four per game, and ninth in steals, with 35.

This year, of course, there is no Vince Hinchen at Boise State.

"It's going to be very much more of a team concept this season," says Jackson, a senior point guard who has led the Broncos to victories in five of their first eight games. "I don't think we've lost much in terms of quickness, and we're still going to be a pretty good shooting team. One thing for sure: we'll be a better defensive team."

That's important in Dye's scheme of basketball. A stickler for defense and teamwork, the second-year BSU coach chafed at the lapses of the individuals he inherited last year. One of the few pleasant surprises was Jackson, a player Dye brought on board with him.

"What we look for from Frank is leadership, more than anything else," says Dye. "The offense is going to change from game to game, and there are going to be nights when he'll score 20 points and nights when he scores 8. What's going to have to be constant is his ability to control the game on the floor."

That's a role that Jackson — a southern California high school star who averaged 19 points as a sophomore at California's Moorpark Community College — relishes.

"The goal is to win the Big Sky championship," he says. "If we can do that, it will satisfy my personal goals."

But Jackson realizes that he will have to shoot the ball more this season to compensate for the absence of Hinchen, and so far he has. Through the first six games, he had averaged 9.3 field goal attempts per game — last season he had an 8.2-shot average.

"Frank's strength as far as basketball is just as a good, all-around athlete," says Dye. "It's not so much as a shooter. But he's played off-guard all of his career before coming to Boise State, so it's taken some time for him to make the adjustment."

Jackson played just one year of high school varsity basketball in

Dantley, Griffith score big as Utah gets by Kansas City

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Adrian Dantley scored 41 points and Darrell Griffith set a league record for three-point field goals in a career as the Utah Jazz downed the Kansas City Kings 133-122 in National Basketball Association action Wednesday night.

Dantley scored 31 points in the first half as Utah threatened to blow the Kings out early. But Kansas City, led by Eddie Johnson and rookie Otis Thorpe, came back to make a game of it.

Griffith had three three-point field goals in the game, giving him 197 in his career and breaking the old NBA record of 194 set by Joe Hassett of Golden State.

Washington 114, Indiana 89

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Jeff Malone scored a game high 25 points, while Dudley Bradley added 22 and Jeff Ruland 18 to lead the Washington Bullets to an easy 114-89 victory over the Indiana Pacers.

New Jersey 112, Detroit 97

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Micheal Ray Richardson scored 26 points, including 12 in the decisive second quarter, as the New Jersey Nets defeated the Detroit Pistons 112-97 at the Meadowlands Arena.

The Nets also got good efforts from Buck Williams, who scored 24 points and had 15 rebounds. Center Mike Gminski contributed 24 points and pulled down 13 rebounds.

Milwaukee 97, Houston 87

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Sidney Moncrief scored 23 points and Terry Cummings added 21 to lead the Milwaukee Bucks to their sixth consecutive victory with a 97-87 decision over Houston.

Moncrief put in eight points during a 14-5 run in the first five minutes of the third quarter as the Bucks opened a 70-55 lead.

Dallas 124, L.A. Clippers 118

DALLAS (AP) — Mark Aguirre scored 31 points and the Dallas Mavericks held off a late Los Angeles Clipper charge, led by Norm Nixon, who recorded his 5,000th career assist, for a 124-118 victory.

NBA roundup

Nixon scored 10 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter, including a basket that pulled LA to within 116-110 with 2:06 to play. A Michael Cage free throw made it 116-111 before Dallas' Jay Vincent and Rolando Blackman hit back-to-back jumpers to put Dallas out of reach at 120-111 with 1:02 to play.

Nixon's, 5,004 career assists are the highest among active players and he is the 12th player in NBA history to get 5,000 assists.

Atlanta 117, New York 105

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Forward Dominique Wilkins scored 34 points to offset a game-high 36-point effort by Bernard King as the Atlanta Hawks defeated the New York Knicks 117-105.

Atlanta, playing the fifth of 12 home games this season in New Orleans, took command from the start, leading 37-21 at the end of the first quarter, and extending it to 69-44 at the half.

Denver 130, San Antonio 119

DENVER (AP) — Mike Evans scored all 18 of his points in the first half and Alex English took over the scoring load in the second half, finishing with 31, to spark the Denver Nuggets over the San Antonio Spurs 130-119.

The victory moved the Nuggets, 18-11, into sole possession of first place in the Midwest Division, ahead of Houston, 17-12, which lost to Milwaukee Wednesday night.

Boston 119, Phoenix 114

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Larry Bird, limited to one point in a lopsided second period, scored 20 of his 34 in the second half as the Boston Celtics beat the Phoenix Suns 119-114.

Phoenix had led 69-57 at halftime after outscoring the Celtics 43-23 with the 43 second-quarter points being a season-high.

But Bird then poured in 16 points in the third period — 12 coming in a 3:48 span — as Boston closed the gap to 95-89.

Clouds may produce snow today

Sun Valley — Forty-three inches of snow are atop Baldy, with 38 at the mid-mountain. No new snow has fallen in the past 24 hours; the total snowfall for the season, incidentally, is 80 inches. The forecast calls for increasing clouds with a chance of snow by today. All lifts are open. Today's hours: 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Pomerelle — Skiing is excellent at Pomerelle on machine-packed runs. There are 56 inches of snow at the lodge, 73 on the mountain. Wednesday there were light winds across clear and sunny skies. Hours today: 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Soldier Mountain — There are 48 inches on top of the mountain. Hours today: 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Buses will be leaving for Soldier Mountain at the following sites and times: Newton's Sports Center, Twin Falls, 7:15 a.m.; Claude's Sports, Jerome, 7:35; Shoshone High School, 8 a.m. and Gooding junior high school, 8:20.

Magic Mountain — Daily operation at Magic Mountain, now under new ownership, will continue through Jan. 6. Snow conditions are packed powder on all major runs with new snow forecast for tonight.

Depths range from 50 to 70 inches. All facilities including lifts, cafeteria, rental shop and ski school are in full operation. Daily bus service is available at $3.50 round trip. Buses leave Newton's in Twin Falls at 8 a.m., K-Mart in Twin Falls at 8:10 a.m., Kimberly Texaco 8:20 a.m., and Daw's store in Hansen at 8:30 a.m. Lifts operate from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Conditions at other major southern Idaho ski resorts:

Bogus Basin — 50 total, no new.

Brundage — 77 total, no new.

Grand Targhee — 90 total, no new.

Pebble Creek — closed.

Kelly Canyon — 37 total, no new.

Snow depth in inches refers to unpacked snow at the top except for Bogus Basin, which reports depth at the base. New snow refers to snow within last 24 hours.

Sorry sir, wrong Bailey

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Thurlow Bailey never used to be confused with anyone else, but now he is.

"I have competition with my name," he said. "I get phone calls asking for Thurl Bailey."

The similarity ends with the name and the fact that both men do their best work on the boards.

Thurl works with hardwood floors and backboards for the Utah Jazz of the National Basketball Association, while Thurlow works with hard and softwood boards in the woodshops of the Granite School District.

"The phone calls come at all hours," said Thurlow, who teaches wood shop at Cottonwood Community School.

"My wife or I answer the phone and have to respond to callers' requests about Thurl with the fact that I'm not the Thurl they are looking for. The funny thing is that sometimes I can't talk them into believing that I'm not Thurl Bailey, but Thurlow Bailey," he said.

Thurl Bailey is the Jazz's second-year forward who played college basketball at North Carolina State, which won the NCAA title when he was a senior.

"I had this man call me last year who was looking for Thurl Bailey. He told me that all of the clothes that I had ordered were ready and that I could come and pick them up.

Big Sky

now 5-4 for the season.

Idaho State, which leads the Big Sky in field goal percentage defense with .412 percent, has been averaging 76.2 points per game to Boise State's 62.

In Reno, Nev., Colorado State plays Cal-Fullerton on Friday, followed by Nevada-Reno against St. Mary's. The Wolf Pack Classic continues with the foursome on Saturday.

The Big Sky's Nevada-Reno is 5-4 for the season with a 65-62 victory against Southern Utah. The Wolf Pack has been blistered by recent losses to Utah and Nevada-Las Vegas.

Heading into the Southern Utah game last week, the Wolf Pack had averaged 90 points a game at home, but scored 65 against the Thunderbirds. In that game, Nevada-Reno lacked the services of guard Curtis High, out with a leg bruise suffered in the loss to Utah.

Tonight, Idaho will be at the Blade City Classic in Ohio for first-round action against Toledo. The tournament also matches Princeton and North Carolina-Charlotte.

The series between Idaho and Toledo stands 2-0 in favor of the Ohio school. Toledo won 60-54 in 1960, the first time the two teams met. Their last game was in 1970, when Toledo bested Idaho 79-64.

Idaho Coach Bill Trumbo is in his second year, while Toledo Coach Bob Nichols is marking his 19th season at the helm of the Rockets.

In Trumbo's first season, the Vandals posted an overall record of 9-19 and 4-11 in conference play. So far this season, Idaho is 5-4.

Entering the 1984-85 season, Nichols had compiled a record of 338-165. His 338 victories are the most ever achieved by a Toledo coach.

The Northern Arizona Lumberjacks head for Billings' KOA Classic, where they will compete for the team title against Eastern Montana, Washington State and Chicago Circle. Northern Arizona won the KOA Classic during the 1982-83 season with victories over Cal-Irvine and Colorado State.

The Lumberjacks won their sixth game of the season against two defeats when they turned back Western State, 103-69.

In other games involving Big Sky teams this week, Montana State plays Cal State-Santa Barbara, Montana hosts Seattle Pacific and Texas Wesleyan is at Weber State. All games are on Saturday.

Jackson

Compton, a suburb of Los Angeles, but he made it count. He made the all-tournament team in his senior season and was recruited by Moorpark, a California juco basketball power. In his sophomore year at Moorpark, he averaged 19 points a game and earned all kinds of regional honors. But there are a lot of 19-point-per-game, 6-2 junior college guards out there.

"We took a look at him, one of my assistants did," says Idaho State Coach Wayne Ballard. "Good athletic ability. It was pretty clear that he could be a good Division I college basketball player."

Dye, coaching at Cal State-Bakersfield at the time, had more frequent contact with Jackson. Jackson was the first player Dye recruited to Boise State when he took the job in the spring of 1983.

"I just liked his attitude on the court," explains Dye.

"A player like Jackson can take care of a lot of things for you," says another Big Sky coach. "It's easy to teach a good athlete how to shoot the ball; it's not so easy to make a shooter into a guy who can run the floor for you."

Offense was the Broncos' big problem last season. Although Hinchen finished the season ranked second in the conference in scoring, Boise State ended up dead last in point production.

"I think I'll do my share of shooting this year — more than last year — but I don't want to force anything," says Jackson. "The important thing is to get more point production as a team. I don't care who scores the points."

Ballard and others like Jackson's style as a defensive player, and it is in Dye's man-to-man defense that Jackson's talents are most apparent.

"Bobby always has good defensive teams, and the reason is that he usually has a guy like Jackson," says a Big Sky coach. "You want a guy who's quick and intelligent and a guy who has a lot of self-discipline."

Dye puts its more succinctly:

"In order for Boise State to win, Frank's got to be pretty consistent on both ends of the floor."

Jackson says he'll take the measure of his personal success this year when the season's over and he sees how many wins the Broncos have.

"We've lost (two) games," he says. "That means we're not playing the way we should."

Coach Dye might have said the same thing. Maybe that's where Frank Jackson heard it.

Ohio State's Bruce leaves two players at home

AZUSA, Calif. (AP) — Ohio State football Coach Earle Bruce announced Wednesday that starting safety Terry White and reserve defensive back Jeff Cargile did not make the Rose Bowl trip for disciplinary reasons.

Bruce refused to elaborate on why the players were left at home when the Ohio State party of 355 people jetted to the West Coast Wednesday for their Rose Bowl date on Jan. 1 with Southern Cal.

Bruce said White, a freshman from Cambridge, Ohio, and Cargile, a sophomore from Cincinnati, would be permitted to rejoin the team on Jan. 7.

White's suspension marked the second defensive starter the Buckeyes, 9-2 and Big Ten Conference champions, have lost since they began their Rose Bowl practices.

Linebacker Larry Kolic quit the squad in early December for what Bruce called personal reasons.

Bruce was asked when he made the decision to suspend White, who tied for the team's interception lead with four, and Cargile.

"Is that important?" he snapped. "Saturday, Sunday, the days all run together. Sure, it hurts when you lose a starter. White had played in all 11 games for us this season."

Kolic ranked second in team tackles and White third behind leader Thomas "Pepper" Johnson this season.

Bruce would not say who would replace White against the Trojans, 8-3, the Pac-10 champions. Steve Hill, a sophomore from Fort Walton Beach, Fla., is listed behind White on the depth charts. Hill started two games a year ago.

As Bruce emerged for the team's first California workout at Citrus Community College, it began to drizzle.

"I thought it didn't out here," he joked with Los Angeles newsmen. "We didn't have this at home."

Bruce said he doesn't feel as if he has a score to settle. The Trojans edged the Buckeyes 18-17 in the 1980 Rose Bowl after his Ohio State team had posted an 11-0 regular-season record.

"I don't look at it that way. It's the Big Ten against the Pac-10. We're 20-20 in the Rose Bowl. This is the rubber game, isn't it?" he asked.

Expect for two instances, Ohio State appears in its best physical condition of the season for its 13th consecutive bowl appearance, and fifth in a row under Bruce.

John Sullivan, a junior defensive tackle, is recovering from arm and back wounds suffered when he was attacked by would-be robbers in Chicago. Sullivan was at home for the Christmas break when the incident happened.

Bruce expects the 6-foot-4, 240-pound Sullivan to join the team Thursday.

John Wooldridge, an Akron, Ohio, junior who serves as fullback Keith Byars' understudy, has a ruptured back disc.

"It's a day-to-day thing with him," said Dr. Robert Murphy, the Buckeyes' team physician.

However, Murphy said center Kirk Lowdermilk and quarterback Mike Tomczak have fully recovered from serious injuries. Lowdermilk broke his leg in the Wisconsin game. Tomczak broke his leg in two spots in a spring game.

Tomczak will play for the first time this season without the benefit of a rubber support cast on his right leg.

QB Fuller healthy for Bears

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Chicago quarterback Steve Fuller is 100 percent physically and ready for action in the playoff game at Washington, Bears Coach Mike Ditka said Wednesday.

"It's a matter of him keeping on throwing the ball, throwing as much as he can," Ditka said of the quarterback, who is recovering from a separated shoulder.

"We don't anticipate a problem. The real test will come when he takes a blow on the shoulder. But we, and our line, know we have got to protect him," Ditka said after the Bears' workout at the Atlanta Falcons' training complex in Suwanee.

"Right now, he's stronger than before the San Diego game when he was hurt," Ditka said.

Another of the Bears' walking wounded, wide receiver Dennis McKinnon, will start against the Redskins Sunday.

McKinnon not only is important to the Bears as a receiver but also as a critical part of the running game, Ditka said.

"He's distinguished himself for his ability to go in there and block people; not only safeties, but cornerbacks and linebackers, anybody who got in his way. He's got good technique and he's willing to hit."

The fleet end, who is recovering from a knee injury, "is about 90 percent," Ditka said.

McKinnon is well enough to "run his normal routes. Okay. It's when he makes a real sharp cut that he slows up a little bit," Ditka added.

The Bears were very loose, joking and playing catch during the workout. Quarterback Jim McMahon, who is suffering from a lacerated kidney, at one point mimicked a wide receiver's miss of a catchable pass.

The team's attitude is good, Ditka said. "Making the playoffs doesn't happen to everybody; it didn't come often to the Bears."

Pittsburgh disturbs Reeves

DENVER (AP) — Denver Bronco Coach Dan Reeves has an uneasy feeling about the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Sunday's playoff opponent did indeed lose to the lowly Indianapolis Colts and Houston Oilers during the regular season. But the Steelers also handed the San Francisco 49ers their lone setback all year — in San Francisco — and they clinched a playoff berth by beating the defending Super Bowl champion Raiders in Los Angeles.

"It takes an excellent football team to beat the 49ers and the Raiders on the road, and the Steelers also demolished the Chargers (52-24) this year," Reeves noted Wednesday at his weekly press conference. "Pittsburgh is an extremely well-coached team. We'll have to play our best to win, but that's the way it should be in the playoffs."

Denver, which finished the regular season with a 13-3 record and the AFC West championship, is a five-point favorite over Pittsburgh, 9-7 and the AFC Central titlist. They will meet at 2 p.m. MST at Mile High Stadium, with the winner facing the victor of the Seattle-Miami game for the conference title.

The teams last met in the 1983 season opener, won by Denver 14-10. "Beating the Steelers in Pittsburgh was an exciting thing last year," said Reeves. "In all my years with the Dallas Cowboys, it seemed like we never won in Pittsburgh.

"Pittsburgh is a much improved team from that game, and so are we. Mark Malone has stepped in for David Woodley and has had some excellent games at quarterback. John Elway just keeps getting better for us. This game matches two active defenses that have caused a lot of turnovers."

The Broncos finished the National Football League regular season ranked second in fumble recoveries with 24. Pittsburgh had 11. The Broncos and Steelers tied for second in interceptions, each with 31.

Candelaria's son in bad health

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates pitcher John Candelaria asked Wednesday for "prayers from those who wish to help" for his infant son, who remained in critical condition after nearly drowning.

John Candelaria Jr., 18 months old, slipped into a swimming pool behind the family's winter home Tuesday afternoon but had been pulled out by the time paramedics arrived.

He was admitted to the hospital at 1:04 p.m. Christmas Day and was still critical Wednesday, said hospital spokesman Richard Field.

Slippery Rock's Heisman push

SLIPPERY ROCK, Pa. (AP) — College football already has its first announced candidate for the 1985 Heisman Trophy: Slippery Rock University running back Chuck Sanders.

Sanders, the leading rusher in NCAA Division II this season, is being pushed for college football's top individual award in a tongue-in-cheek campaign by John Carpenter, Slippery Rock's sports information director.

"You couldn't get away with this at any other school, but with us it's different because people are fascinated with our name," Carpenter said.

Slippery Rock's unique name has made it perhaps the nation's best known small-college team, and its scores are often announced at stadiums along with those of the Ohio States, Southern Cals and Michigans of the major college world.

Sanders, converted from fullback to tailback early this season, responded with 1,280 rushing yards for Slippery Rock, a western Pennsylvania school of 6,200 students, located about 50 miles from Pittsburgh.

Roof for Chiefs' stadium?

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Jackson County Sports Complex Authority on Wednesday voted to ask state lawmakers to issue up to $50 million in industrial revenue bonds to finance construction of a roof over Arrowhead Stadium — home of the National Football League's Kansas City Chiefs.

Gad Smith, attorney for the authority said the action serves as a request to the Missouri Legislature to earmark $50 million in revenue bonds for the project, but does not obligate them to proceed with construction of the roof.

The resolution, which was unanimously approved by the five-member commission, also authorized the Chiefs to build the roof. In that case, the authority would repay the football club from bond proceeds, according to the resolution.

Kriek, Gerulaitis in Masters

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans Johan Kriek and Vitas Gerulaitis have captured the final two spots in the $400,000 Volvo Masters tennis championships, which will be held Jan. 8-13 in New York's Madison Square Garden, tournament director Raymond Benton announced Wednesday.

Kriek will face Ecuador's Andres Gomez, the tournament's fifth-ranked player, in an opening round match Jan. 8, while Gerulaitis will play Sweden's Joakim Nystrom the next evening.

NOTICE OF INTENT TO AMEND THE STATE WATER PLAN BEFORE THE IDAHO WATER RESOURCE BOARD

Notice is hereby given, pursuant to Section 67-5203, Idaho Code, that the Idaho Water Resources Board intends to amend Policy 32, Snake River Basin, of the State Water Plan. Pursuant to its duties prescribed in Section 42-1734, Idaho Code, the Idaho Water Resource Board intends to change policy as it relates to the coordinated program for the conservation, development, and use of the waters of the Snake River Basin.

Major changes proposed include:

1. Changing the established minimum daily flow at the Murphy gage from a year-round flow of 3300 cfs to a minimum daily flow of 3900 cfs for the period from April 1 to October 31 and of 5600 cfs from November 1 to March 31.

2. To provide that waters held in trust by the state be reallocated to other uses only when they satisfy all provisions of state law.

3. To impose restrictions on the diversion of water to storage during the nonirrigation season in the reach of Snake River from Milner Dam to Murphy gage.

4. To provide that stored water be acquired by the state to provide management flexibility in assuring the minimum flows designated for the Snake River.

5. The deletion of an endorsement of a target acreage for new agricultural development.

Public hearings on the proposed changes to Policy 32 of the State Water Plan will be held by the Idaho Water Resource board at 2:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. on January 24, 1985 at the Canyon Springs Inn, 1357 Blue Lakes Blvd. North, Twin Falls.

Interested persons may present their views, data, and arguments in writing to the undersigned on or before February 22, 1985, or may present them orally or in writing at the public hearing.

Copies of the proposed Policy 32, Snake River Basin may be obtained by written request from the Director, Department of Water Resources, Statehouse, Boise, Idaho 83720. Copies may also be obtained at the regional offices of the Department in Boise, Idaho Falls, Twin Falls, and Coeur d'Alene.

THE ACES® BY DOROTHY WOLFF

"Most of the evils of life arise from man's being unable to sit still in a room."

— Blaise Pascal.

Many a good game is thrown away in the play of the trump suit. General rules don't always apply and one must choose the best of several alternatives.

East took the first two clubs and shifted to a low heart, South winning his ace. A trump was led to dummy's ace and a trump was finessed to South's jack and West's queen. West exited with his third trump and South's chances were gone — he had to duck the first diamond to West to hold his losses to one down.

When Bill Granberry of Houston, Texas, played the same game in a recent team contest, he handled trumps in a different way. After losing two clubs and winning the heart shift, Bill finessed in diamonds before touching trumps. This finesse had to be taken in any event and the trumps could wait.

When the diamond finesse won, the game was a cinch as long as the red suits broke nicely. Bill therefore cashed the two top trumps and the diamond ace. A diamond ruff established the suit and West was stuck.

Had West overruffed, dummy's diamonds would have provided for South's losers. When West refused to ruff, Bill cashed his heart king and ruffed a heart in dummy. His last heart went on a good diamond and West got only his queen of trumps.

America's first fishing calendar has its roots in a kitchen in Murtaugh

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — Forget any perceptions you might have of the typical land office business setup. Bobbi Wolverton operates an international market right out of her home in Murtaugh.

The product of this successful venture is her "Angler's Calendar & Fishing Handbook" — a docket featuring photographs of the most picturesque fishing spots in the country and a directory of angling shops nationwide.

Wolverton's territory of sales covers all 50 states and eight countries, including Japan, Canada, Italy and Singapore. Customers in Japan alone call for a standing order of 2,000.

Locally the calendar can be found in Twin Falls at Judy's book store, Clos Office Supply and Ruel Stayner Sporting Goods.

Wolverton produced her first calendar for 1976 and has steadily built a demand for the product since then. Sales have continued to be fruitful, in fact her 1979 calendar sold 34,000 copies. This year's supply has been sold out twice and a third printing is expected.

"There wasn't a fishing calendar on the market before mine," says Wolverton, a Connecticut native who now lives on the Wolverton family ranch outside of Murtaugh with her husband Mike and 20-month old son Matt.

She now has two competitors out of Sun Valley and Colorado, but orders keep flowing in and daily United Parcel Service pickups at the Wolverton's door continue from June through February.

It wasn't specifically her interest in the sport of fishing, but simply the outdoors that sparked her desire to produce the calendar.

Although the product is not sponsored by any organization, Wolverton has two local assistants — Pam Grimm and Diana Breeding — who help out during the busiest periods that Wolverton says turn her upstairs into a "real zoo."

Wolverton's job experience, from work at Sierra Design in California to a Times-News advertiser, has given her the background to produce such an item. And although she majored in art history at the University of California at Berkeley, she says she has always had an interest in business.

"My father raised me with a keen business sense," she says. "He's 76 now and we still talk business when he calls."

That sense comes in handy considering Wolverton's view that the key to success with such a dated item depends more on advertising and distribution than on the product itself.

"It's not the calendar, it's the marketing," she says of the process that begins in December and runs throughout the following year.

Wolverton contacts her five distributors early in the year before a March rush to deal with a list of 1600 sporting goods shops and book stores, 250 of which normally purchase calendars. Some of her more prominent distributors include B. Dalton books, Nieman-Marcus and Cabela's, a nationwide outdoors catalog out of Nebraska.

"It's really hard to keep going (on the marketing)," Wolverton says. "You just have to force yourself."

Photographs for the calendar are selected in March each year from an assortment of around 500 slides of all different qualities. While some contribute several exceptional pictures, says Wolverton, many are thrown out.

"We seriously get a lot of 'Uncle Joe holding up his big catch'-pictures," says Wolverton, an amateur photographer herself whose work can be seen in the calendar and has been included in fishing magazines worldwide.

The calendar also includes feature stories on fishing and dates of national angling expositions and seasonal fly hatches. Each page carries a sketch of a fishing fly by Hal Janssen, a leading fly fisherman from Santa Rosa, Calif.

Once the calendar is designed it is typeset in Twin Falls and then sent to Salt Lake City towards the end of May to be printed. The first batch is then shipped to resorts and national parks in time for the tourist season.

Despite apparent lucrative sales, the $40,000 production cost for the calendar eats up most of the profits from purchases by businesses. What modest profit Wolverton does take in comes from sales to individuals, including former President Jimmy Carter and Bing Crosby up until his death.

The real benefits come in the form of paid vacations from various resorts and airlines the Wolvertons write up in the calendar.

For instance, the Wolvertons were treated to a trip last February on Christmas Island after Mike Wolverton highlighted the Central Pacific haven in a feature article for the 1985 edition. Continental Airlines allows the Wolvertons free air travel in return for the exposure they receive.

All of Bobbi Wolverton's business endeavors, however, haven't been as successful as the calendar. She tried marketing a weekly appointment book a few years ago that was a disaster due partly to high production costs. "It was a bomb. . .I can only be beaten so much," Wolverton laughs.

In addition to the current calendar, she is helping to produce a book — "Flyfishing Always" — for the Federation of Fly Fishers. The book, of which Carter wrote the dedication, is a volunteer effort by Federation members and will be available through the Federation in West Yellowstone, Mont.

Oil spill stifles Puget Sound waterfowl

MUKILTEO, Wash. (AP) — Cleanup crews surveyed Puget Sound beaches Wednesday to make sure they had found all areas blackened by last week's oil spill, as volunteers continued to nurse oil-sickened birds back to health.

Contractors hired by the Coast Guard walked beaches Wednesday looking for oil residue, but Petty Officer Don McCollum said cleanup efforts were winding down.

"There's a few areas that need to be cleaned and we're in the process of doing that," he said.

An estimated 5,000 gallons of oil were dumped or leaked Friday near the southern end of Whidbey Island by an unidentified northbound ship. The oil began drifting ashore Saturday, smearing a five-to six-mile section on the south end of Whidbey Island between Clinton and Possession Point.

McCollum said oil also united ashore at spots on Marrowstone and Indian islands near Port Townsend and on Bainbridge Island near Point Monroe. Contractors also were checking Mutiny Bay on the southwest side of Whidbey.

The Coast Guard has set aside $100,000 for the cleanup, Coast Guard officials said they didn't think marine life other than birds was harmed.

At a temporary bird-cleaning clinic set up at Olympic View Junior High School here, dozens of volunteers have been helping around the clock to save hundreds of seabirds smeared with oil.

Veterinary technician Kaye Baxter said a steady stream of volunteers gave up Christmas celebrations Tuesday to wash and treat birds.

The Coast Guard has estimated that as many as 1,500 birds may have been contaminated by the oil, and about 150-200 have died. Ms. Baxter said rescue efforts would continue as long as live birds were being found.

However, Sterling Lance of the Pilchuck Audubon Society estimated that 3,000 to 6,000 birds could be expected to die from shock or poisoning from the spill.

"For every bird we save, we figure there are at least 10 out there dying a painful death," Lance said.

Lance said that more than 300 birds had been brought to the temporary clinic. McCollum said only about 19 of the treated birds had died so far.

Jules James, a volunteer at the bird clinic, said scores of volunteers have been searching beaches for oil-soaked birds.

Once the birds are cleaned and stabilized, they are turned over to "rehabilitators," volunteers who care for the birds for a few weeks until the creatures' natural oils are redistributed through their feathers and they can be released.

"We really need funding of some kind for rehabilitators who are going to pay for this out of their pockets," Ms. Baxter said. "Believe me — you get 15 western grebes eating their weight in fish every day, and it gets expensive."

The Coast Guard is trying to find the northbound vessel that spilled the relatively heavy IFO-180 oil.

Coast Guard Lt. Curtis Stock said oil samples from two of the "four or five ships" that are the most likely suspects have been obtained. But he said a couple of vessels that could have been involved were headed to foreign ports, which would make it difficult to obtain samples.

Under international agreements, the vessel responsible for the spill could be held liable for the cleanup.

Fawns, coyotes begin winter survival game

Mike Harrop Outdoors

While feeding cattle a few days before Christmas, I noticed something stuck in a netting wire fence.

Investigation brought a ghastly sight: a mule deer fawn had been run into the wire by coyotes.

The fawn — a young buck by his button antlers — had been eaten alive when his head became entangled in the wire. Each of his struggles had been recorded in the snow along with the footprints of the coyotes.

Such tragedies are not uncommon–wintering deer grow stupid as their metabolic rate drops to allow them to subsist on less food than nature offers in the summertime.

Fences are barriers that deer must cross if they are to find food, shelter and escape from predators on today's winter ranges. Deer often become entangled in them if they miscalculate the energy needed to clear the wire.

Most often, the fence is the loser. I spend about as much time patching the fences behind the deer herds as I do writing some weeks.

But fawns are particularly susceptible to fences.

Deer must learn to jump the fences by experience, and fawns are often not well-developed by the time they reach the lower winter ranges where fences abound.

As a result of their comparative weakness, they often try to go through fences or under them in situations where a full-grown animal would clear the fence in a single bound, possibly without losing the rhythym of a full-out escape run.

Sometimes the results are tragic, but sometimes chance can be kinder.

The next day brought a tangled fawn with a happier ending.

While loading hay on a pickup truck, I noticed a fawn peering at me from a narrow space between the bales and the eight-foot wooden panels placed to keep deer from eating the haystack before it can be given to the cattle.

I put my dogs in the truck cab where they couldn't participate in the rescue mission, then took the panel down to let the fawn out.

Trapped with too little room to stand, it looked as though he'd been stuck in there for several days. All the snow had been licked up and a third of a bale of hay had been devoured. His coat was rubbed down to bleeding hide in patches where he'd struggled against the rough boards in an effort to get out again.

Although the deer was free to leave, he didn't get up immediately, and I was a little reluctant to reach down and get him.

Mule deer have sharp hooves and can kick very hard.

But I decided this one couldn't kick–he was too stiff from his confinement in a lying position. Gingerly, I bent over, grabbed him by the ear and hauled him to his feet.

Although he was up, he still wasn't setting any speed records for running away. His trembling legs barely supported him.

I began rubbing his back legs roughly to restore circulation to them, and the fawn indicated improvement by kicking my hat off as he got his legs into gear.

He ran up the hillside, trying to get his feet to support him but running on his ankles until they did the job.

I think he's all right, unless the coyotes found him before he recovered.

And that's where my winter wildlife score stands today: deer 1, coyotes 1.

I've discovered some fine points of keeping deer alive through the process of living in an area where hundreds of the critters winter.

Indians' commerical steelhead fishing faces new attacks

By GEORGE GREER
Idaho State Journal

POCATELLO, Idaho (AP) — A fishing war is brewing over steelhead, pitting Indians against non-Indians, and it promises to be fought on the floor of Congress.

There are independent movements afoot in Idaho and Washington to introduce a bill in Congress which would elevate the status of steelhead to a national game fish. That in turn would end commerical fishing for the species — mainly by Indian gillnetters on the lower Columbia River.

The gillnetters have been blamed for turning Idaho's predicted bonanza fish runs into just another steelhead season and angry non-Indian anglers demand that something be done about it.

A recent editorial in the Wood River Journal had a clip-out coupon addressed to Idaho's senators, Steve Symms and James McClure, stating, "I would like to express my displeasure with the commercial slaughter of the steelhead runs by the Indian tribes on the lower Columbia River. I believe the steelhead should be elevated to the status of game fish and federal legislation should be passed to enforce this designation."

"It's a game fish in Idaho, Oregon and Washington," said Herb Pollard, Department of Fish and Game anadromous fisheries coordinator. "It only recently became a game fish in Washington, and by recently I mean in the last 10 years, to prohibit the commericial sale of steelhead. In Oregon it was about 20 years ago. In Idaho we haven't had a commercial fishery since the department has been in operation."

Indian tribes, however, are exempt from state law, thus the push to pass a federal bill. Indians can sell steelhead. "As far as I know it's sold outside the Northwest and probably sold as chinook or maybe coho salmon," Pollard said.

In the state of Washington the steelhead movement is further along than it is in Idaho. "Washington passed an initiative in the most recent election, Initiative 456, which basically said Indian tribes should not have rights other than those accorded general citizens off the reservation," Pollard said.

Six of eight representatives and both senators from Washington plan to introduce a much-narrower bill than Initiative 456, restricting it to the steelhead issue.

"That type of legislation should get introduced this year," Pollard, and he feels the Idaho delegation should support it.

Foul, says Doug Dompier, manager of fisheries technical services for the Columbia River Intertribal Fish Commission, which is headquartered at Portland, Ore.

"We went through this two years ago," he said. "We vigorously opposed such a move and I'm certain we'll oppose that again. The intent is to take away treaty fishing rights from our tribes. It's to eliminate treaty harvest. The tribes aren't going to give up a treaty right. It seems like it is one of these things which crops up every couple years and we have to deal with."

Such a bill would be "very racist," Dompier claimed. "You're attacking one group of people, the Indian people, with that legislation. Whenever anyone attacks a group of people in that fashion, it's very racist."

Pollard disagrees.

"I really don't think it's a racist issue; I think it's a conservation and resource issue, which they (lower Columbia tribes) brought on themselves with situations like this year's. We had a record run. They could have taken a lot of fish and we still could have had a good run (in Idaho)."

Dompier said the proposed bill's chances of succeeding are "very slim to none. If something like that were introduced, I'm sure the tribes will take a position on it ... It would take a lot of congressmen to do that (pass the bill).

"The other side of the coin and something that's very sad, is that a lot of peoples' efforts would go into either supporting it or opposing it, whereas we've tried to develop cooperation (in managing the fishery)."

The Shoshone-Bannocks, who fish the upper reaches of the Salmon River, have not taken a stance, but tribal attorney Jack Ross said the tribal council would probably address it this week.

"In light of our recent position on downstream fishing by other Indian tribes, this clearly shows the need for more equitable allocation of steelhead harvest among the various user groups in the Columbia and Salmon river basins," Ross said.

"Downriver tribes do have treaty rights to take steelhead for commercial purposes. As a legal matter, any effort that would attempt to ban treaty fishing for steelhead would raise serious questions, in my view," Ross said.

"There has to be respect for treaty rights that have been upheld by federal court, but at the same time those Indian tribes must realize that the resource must be shared," Ross said.

An estimated 315,000 fish went over Bonneville Dam on the Columbia, which was the highest number since Bonneville Dam was built in 1937. Of that number, 91,000 cleared Granite Dam, the last obstacle before the fish enter Idaho. That was the second-largest run to enter Idaho in recent history, according to Pollard.

Of the 315,000, Indian fishermen harvested about 70,000 and non-Indian anglers are expected to have harvested that same number when they are through fishing the run, according to Dompier.

Idaho Fish and Game Department officials "are always opposed to tribes harvesting these fish," Dompier contended.

Idaho has no grounds for complaint, Dompier said, since it reached its quota goal with the 91,000. "Most people in Idaho don't realize that run is a very large run. They haven't seen a larger run since the dams were built. They don't realize that they are predominately hatchery runs."

Instead of the fish distributing themselves to the natural spawning areas, they return to the hatcheries, according to Dompier.

The Indians' rights to take the fish go back to treaties signed in the 1850s.

"Those people who developed and signed those treaties didn't anticipate a situation where rights are reserved to a few hundred Indians whereas thousands and thousands of other fishermen get to divvy up what's left over," Pollard said.

Don't overlook leaded line

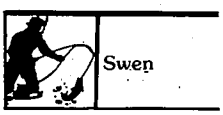

An innovation of a few years ago will increase your catch and make a fisherman's life more bearable.

The innovation is the leaded line used as a sinker.

It is used by the fly fisherman and bait fisherman and makes an instant nymph fly fisherman out of the spin fisherman.

Getting the length of leaded line may be the biggest problem in this fishing method. My suggestion is to check with your boat fishermen friends and see if they use the leaded line while trolling. Now beg about 18 inches. That will not harm the effective use by the troller.

One area that I have found the method works is the Richfield Canala, where snags are a problem and getting the fly down into the bottom of the riffles at the end of the bends always has been a problem. The usual use of pinch-on sinkers will cause hangups and the loss of a dozen flys a day.

The use of a piece of leaded line is nothing new. During the 1960s, there were to pieces of line on the market that were used by spin-casting fishermen. They were called a "wet head" for s inking fly and a "dry head" for using floating flys.

The fly fishing group picked up on the theory and many upstream fly fishermen began to use the piece of leaded line to get the fly down quickly.

Most spin-fishermen quickly forgot the leaded line use and reverted to fly fishing with a pastic bubble filled with water.

On a recent trip to the Snake River, I noticed the water coming from the power plant on the Malad River was crystal clear. With the use of the leaded line I could get the nymph down in the swift water and had the added fonus of watching just how the fish attacked the fly.

Using the piece of leaded line begets the learning of how to tie the rig on.

This entrails the vuse of the nail knot. This knot has been used for centuries to tie your leader to you fly line and you use this same knot to attach not only your line to the leaded line but your leader material to the other end of the leaded line.

One innovation to the nail know is to use a hollow tube instead of the nail. It makes it easy to thread the line back through the tube. I carry my one-inch piece of tube in my hatband.

The big problem spin cast fishermen have while fly fishing with this rig is to keep a tight line and setting the hook after the fish strikes. It is much like fly fishing and learning to snap your wrest on each strike is the main ingredient in catching fish.

One suggestion is to use a leader material that is at least two pounds lighter than your line test. If you do snag you will break your leader material rather than your line.

The value of recreational fishing was brought home by a study done on the Chesapeake Bay fishery.

Over the last year, fishing for rockfish was closed to protect the specie. During this closure, the Northeast lost 7,5000 jobs and an estimated $218 million in economic activity. The three-year study produced interesting results for sports fishermen as well.

Fishermen in Massachusetts were spending an average of $78 per trip and they averaged one stripe bass per four trips — or $312 per fish.

Now the fishery might be lost. Now the states that use the Chesapeak bay are all trying to find someone to blame on the decline of the fishing.

Very few factories employ 7,500 people and very few industries put $218 million into the economy.

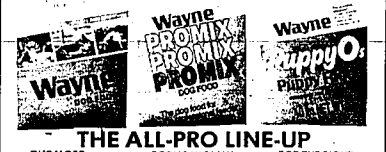

If such an employed has existed, the trauma of shutting down would have been the cause of a Dow-Jones crisis. But now it is probably too late to do anything about it. The studies show the ecology was hampered to the point where the fish could not reproduce. Now we stand around cursing the darkness.

And, Idaho boys, don't be smug. I fish almost the whole state and find that each year the changes in our rivers and streams make for less and less chance that we can hope to have fishing for our grandchildren.

And, we, too, are standing, cursing the darkness that will eventually come.

Swen is an avid Twin Falls fisherman who writes a weekly column for The Times-News.

"Zilog came to Idaho for a lot of reasons. One was low electric rates."

In 1978, Zilog, a California-based manufacturer of high quality computer chips built and occupied a new plant in Nampa.

Why did this modern, high tech company pick Idaho for its expansion? Idaho Power's low rates were one reason. Dennis Fowler, plant manager in Nampa, explains.

"Zilog came to Idaho for a lot of reasons. Clearly one of them was the availability and cost of electrical power.

"We found that the rates here were about a third of what they were in California. And this is very important to us, because in our industry, we do use a lot of electricity."

More and more companies are finding Idaho a great place to do business, bringing with them jobs, tax base and an appreciation of what makes Idaho Idaho. And thanks to hydroelectric generation, Idaho Power's low rates play a big part in attracting them.

Idaho Power's low electric rates mean business.

Wall Street in holiday doldrums' grip

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly in slow trading Wednesday, failing to follow through its pre-Christmas rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 11.16 points Monday, slipped back 1.22 to 1,208.92.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange, at 46.70 million shares, was the second lightest of the year, surpassing only the 46.36 million that changed hands in a Columbus Day session Oct. 8. On Monday 55.55 million shares were traded.

Analysts said many investors were preoccupied with yearend maneuvering for tax purposes and, in the case of professional money managers, readying their portfolios for reports to customers and shareholders.

Other than that, Wall Streeters were expecting relatively little action through the last few sessions of the year, with a good many market participants taking extended holiday breaks.

Stock prices advanced on Monday in response to the Federal Reserve's lowering of its discount rate from 8½ to 8 percent, and to hopes that other interest rates would continue to fall.

However, rates turned upward in the bond market Wednesday. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction frm interest rates, posted losses approaching $10 for every $1,000 in face value.

There is little economic news on the calendar this week. On Friday, the government is scheduled to report on the index of leading economic indicators for November.

Advance estimates are that the index, which is designed to detect future economic trends, will show a healthy rebound from its decline in October. Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. has projected an increase of about 1 percent.

Phillips Petroleum rose ⅞ to 46⅛. The stock fell 9⅝ Monday after a group led by T. Boone Pickens, chairman of Mesa Petroleum, reached an agreement to end a takeover bid for Phillips.

Other energy issues were mixed, with mostly small price changes.

In the blue-chip industrial sector, International Business Machines dropped ½ to 123¾; General Electric lost ⅜ to 56¾; Procter & Gamble gained ¼ to 56¾, and Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing was unchanged at 79¾.

Sears Roebuck traded at 31⅞, off ⅛. The company said it expects to post a "modest" increase in sales for the five weeks through next Saturday over the record total recorded in the holiday selling season last year.

In the daily tally on the Big Board, about eight issues fell in price for every seven that gained ground. The exchange's composite index lost .14 to 96.04.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 59.64 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials dropped .31 to 185.84, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down .29 at 166.47.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose .24 to 246.06. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 202.42, up .01.

Commercial building rises

BOISE (AP) — The number of Idaho residential building permits issued in November declined significantly from a year earlier, but the value of commercial construction jumped, according to the Idaho Construction Report.

The report by First Security Bank of Idaho said total construction value for authorized building permit construction in 54 Idaho locations during November was about $25.2 million, or 7.1 percent below November 1983.

Construction began on 238 dwelling units in those locations during November, at a total value of $11.1 million, down 42.7 percent in number and 30.9 percent in value from a year ago.

The report attributed the decline primarily to the national slowdown in economic growth, but said the recent mortgage rate decline should strengthen residential construction activity for the first quarter of 1985.

Commercial construction in November, valued at about $7.47 million, was up 80.6 percent from last year. November alterations and repairs totaled $6.67 million, down 4.3 percent from 1983.
